

Pub Board bill rejected by CGC

The Campus Governing Council (CGC) rejected a bill containing five amendments to the Publications Board (Pub Board) by-laws Tuesday night.

CGC also approved a campus-wide referendum for Nov. 6. Students will vote on whether to raise student activities fees in order to establish a Public Interest Research Group (PIRG) chapter on campus.

PIRG is a nationwide student consumer's organization which, if established here, would supersede many of the activities now performed by the Student Consumer Action Union. Student Body President Marcus Williams asked for and received an additional $1,000 for the Individual Student's Rights Colloquium. The money will be used to pay speaking fees for Angela Davis.

Representatives Robert Esleeck and Becky Veazey argued that some attempt to draw a conservative speaker to the colloquium should also be made.

Specifically, debate over the Pub Board bill centered on two of the amendments. One would have switched the Daily Tar Heel's representative from a voting to a non-voting member, and the other would have prohibited paid members of organizations supervised by the Pub Board from being appointed to the commission.

The bill was introduced by Finance Committee Chairman Carl Fox on behalf of Student Body Treasurer Tim Dugan.

Debate over the clause preventing paid members of Pub Board organizations from being appointed to the Board stemmed from a dispute over the board's purpose.

Fox, Dugan, and other proponents of the clause said the Pub Board is a regulatory agency for the publications, which include the DTH, the Yackety-Yack, WCAR, the Carolina Quarterly, and the Cellar Door.

"If you set up a regulatory agency, you want to know the people on it are without vested interest in the thing which is being regulated," Dugan said Wednesday.

CGC member John Sawyer argued against the clause, saying, "Effectively, you are striking the qualifications of experience and interest in order to serve on the board."

A vote to strike failed, 8-7. The other controversial clause in Tuesday night's bill involved the publications' voting rights. The by-laws presently allow all five organizations to send one representative to the board, but only the DTH has a vote.

Tuesday night's vote would have stripped the DTH representative of this vote under the theory that all publications should have equal power on the board.

Dearmon proposed changing the wording of the bill in order to allow all organizations a vote, and the proposal passed, 8-7.

However, the bill itself failed, 7-5, with three abstentions.

The legislators also voted to return any budgetary surpluses taken from Pub Board organizations last summer. This was the first action taken under the new constitutional amendment which was overwhelmingly approved in a campus-wide referendum last week.

N.C. legislature funds internships

If you are a junior or senior social science major, you may want to consider the legislative internship program for the 1975 North Carolina General Assembly.

Interns will take two courses in government at North Carolina State University, work 25 hours a week as legislative assistants for North Carolina House or Senate members, attend weekly seminars, receive 12 hours of academic credit, and get paid $1,000.

"The interns are the right arms of the legislators," said Lucy Hancock, director of the program. "The state legislature, unlike Congress, does not have a big staff to research for them; these interns really make a difference."

The two political science courses concentrate on the legislative process and problems of state government. The seminars, composed entirely of interns, will present speakers from all facets of state government. Interns will discuss issues with government leaders, including the governor, the lieutenant governor and the speaker of the house.

The $1,000 stipend will cover living expenses for the semester. Hancock said she would help provide housing for the interns.

The deadline for applications is Oct. 25. Applications are available from the UNC political science department office or Lucy Hancock, 201 Tomkins Hall, North Carolina State University, Raleigh, N.C.

Ten students will be selected from the entire state. Around 150 applications are expected, from which 25 will be chosen for interviews with the speaker of the house, the president of the senate, and the director of the program.

The internship will begin on Jan. 13, 1975.

Rape attempt unsuccessful

A 21-year-old Durham resident escaped a rape attempt without injury early Wednesday morning, Chapel Hill police Lt. Arnold Gold said Wednesday.

Police detectives are investigating the incident, Gold said.

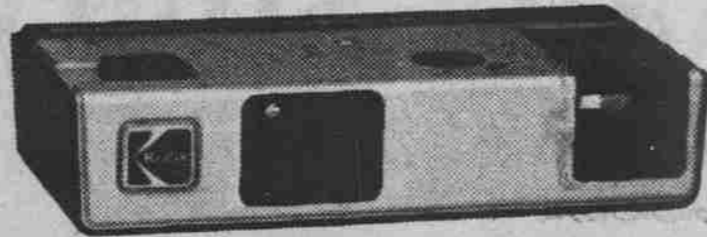

The attempt occurred in UNC's Hill Hall parking lot. The girl reported she was resting in her date's car after leaving him in Town Hall when a white male entered the car and threatened her with a knife, Gold said.

The man fled when another car drove by and the girl screamed.

IF A MOUNTAIN CAN BE A POSTCARD, WHY CAN'T YOU?

You have practically everything it takes to be a postcard, if you have a Kodak pocket Instamatic camera. You see, pocket pictures are nearly postcard-size—big enough to drop in a mailbox as is. Just flip over a favorite pocket snapshot of yourself, address it, put on an 8¢ stamp and you're ready to go. It's fun being a postcard. Ask any mountain.

KODAK POCKET INSTAMATIC CAMERAS

Six models to choose from. Prices start at less than $29.

RHA election Oct. 16

Elections will be held Wednesday, Oct. 16 to fill two RHA Governing Board seats left vacant by the resignation of two representatives. The Governing Board Wednesday accepted the resignation of Bill Lowe (Old East, Old West, Carr) and Ann Berman (Morehead, Joyner). Residents of those dorms who wish to run for either seat should sign up by midnight Monday, Oct. 14. The sign-up sheet will be posted on the door of the RHA office.

In other business, the Board voted unanimously to establish the position of RHA Executive Vice-President to serve as a liaison between the RHA president and the Governing Board. The Executive Vice-President will also serve as the board's chief administrative aide and spokesman. Bill Bates, Dormitory Trade Association chairman, was nominated to fill the position. The board will not vote on candidates for the office, however, until Oct. 16. The Governing Board also voted unanimously to merge the RHA Program Board with the newly created Campus Program Council. CPC was established Oct. 8 by the Campus Governing Council and will combine fraternities, sororities, and residence halls under one academic and social programming board.
