

Two issues delay charter action

by Tim Pittman
Staff Writer

RALEIGH — Two controversial provisions — social service programs and day care centers — in Chapel Hill's newly revised charter forced the House Local Government Committee Wednesday to delay action on the charter.

State Rep. Trish Hunt, D-Orange, said she would recommend that Chapel Hill hold another public hearing to discuss the controversial provisions.

By including the right to set up social service programs in its charter, Chapel Hill is establishing a North Carolina precedent. Currently, no municipality in the state has the power to operate social services.

Both the social service program and the day care center proposals were added to the charter by the Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen after a public hearing on recommended charter changes.

However, both county and town officials agreed on an amendment during a meeting in Chapel Hill last week which, stated that Chapel Hill will not assume county responsibilities in the area of social services or compete for funds.

Chapel Hill Mayor Howard Lee, who presented the charter to the legislative committee, said, "The powers expressed herein are not meant to interfere with any other county programs. "We are including these amendments so as to be able to serve a larger number of people," Lee said.

Last week, the Orange County Board of Social Services charged the town with assuming county powers. But at yesterday's meeting, Flo Garret, chairman of the social service board, said the proposed amendment clears up any problems. "I think it still leaves the county in a position of leadership in social services."

Garret's statement represented the opinion of the Orange County Director of Social Services Thomas Ward.

Although Orange county officials presented no opposition to the day care proposals, Roland Giduz, former Chapel Hill alderman, questioned whether municipal support of day care is legal.

Sexuality course cancelled

The popular course on human sexuality, Health Education 33, is being cancelled for the summer session and the fall semester, Dr. Godfrey M. Hochbaum of the School of Public Health announced this week.

Hochbaum cited the lack of funds for hiring a full-time professor as a reason for the temporary cancellation.

"We have no on-going budget and each semester we've had to get our funding from leftovers in arts and sciences and public health. Also, there hasn't been a single professor to devote a proper amount of time to the course and the students. I've taught the course with whatever time I could spare and with graduate students."

Hochbaum said the course will be offered in the spring of 1976.

In the past, students have waited all night to get permission slips for the course. It was taught until 1972 by Dr. Takey Crist.

"Under Dr. Crist, the course was sexy and easy," Hochbaum said. "But we've still had to turn people away despite making the course more demanding and serious."

"Student evaluations have been quite positive on the whole, but they are also critical of the lack of continuity the course has had. I don't blame them," Hochbaum said the bulk of teaching was done by graduate students and outside speakers.

Hochbaum said he feels the University should take the responsibility for funding the course and finging a full-time professor.

The two deans Hochbaum said were responsible for funding the course in the past, James R. Gaskin of arts and sciences and Bernard Greenberg of the School of Public Health, could not be reached for comment.

Budget hearing to start

The CGC Finance Committee will begin hearing 1975-76 budget requests this Friday, Chairman Bill Strickland announced Wednesday.

Those organizations in the "communications" category of the budget will appear before the committee at 3:30 p.m. Friday. Included are the Media Board, the Daily Tar Heel, the Yackety-Yack, WCAR, the Carolina Quarterly, and the Cellar Door.

Tuesday, April 18, the committee is tentatively planning to hear requests from the Sports Club Council, Human Sexuality Counseling Service, North Carolina Student Legislature and Toronto Exchange Program.

Each organization may have up to five minutes to relate any information it feels relevant to the committee before facing questioning.

The highlight of this year's auction will be a special item donated by Blimpies, to be auctioned at 9 p.m.

The list of items to be auctioned includes an autographed photo and embroidered handkerchief from Carol Burnett, a letter opener from Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., a vice presidential pen from Spiro Agnew, and autographed copy of the U.S. Constitution from former Senator Sam Ervin, an autographed baseball from Jim "Catfish" Hunter, a used coaching shirt from UNC basketball coach Dean Smith, an ashtray from Sen. Jesse Helms, and a print of the LBJ ranch from Lady Bird Johnson.

Several fraternities and sororities are also offering items, including a tape of Richard Nixon's resignation speech from Tau Epsilon Phi, a puppy from Sigma Sigma Sigma, four days of free meals from Delta Delta Delta, a beach weekend from Phi Mu, a triple date with Becky Branch, Debbie Timmons, and Marie Morris from Alpha Delta Pi, and a boa constrictor with a cage from APO.

Ed Allen, chairman of the Campus Chest Auction, warns participants that "a bid made is like a card laid. Don't make a bid if you can't cover it."
