Terps lead stat race

GREENSBORO-Maryland, which started with a bang in its season opener against Villanova two weeks ago, has jumped off to a big lead in the Atlantic Coast Conference team statistical race.

The Terps lead the league in both total and

Sports trivia quiz

The UNC intramural (IM) staff is sponsoring a sports trivia contest. Each week a new sports trivia question will be published in the Tar Heel. Those wishing to answer the question must come by the IM office (215 Woollen Gymnasium and deposit the answer in the trivia box. The names of those who respond correctly will be placed in a drawing for a grand prize to be determined later. The correct answer for each week's question will appear with the new question for the following week. Any questions should be directed to the IM staff.

This week's question: Who is the only major league pitcher to pitch to both Mickey Mantle and Babe Ruth in a regular season pass offense as well as in both total and rushing defense. They are one of three league members who have played two games to

The defending champions had one of their finest offensive showings in recent years when they rolled up 575 yards in scoring a 41-0 victory over Villanova.

Most of the yardage gained was on passing as two Maryland quarterbacks hit on 14 of 20 aerials for 350 yards. Against Tennessee last week the Terps outgained the Vols 308 to 250 yards. They got 240 yards through the air and 68 on the ground.

Most of the offensive success in the first two outings was credited to sophomore Mark Manges, who accounted for 330 yards. Manges was injured in the Tennessee game and is out for an indefinite period with a separated shoulder. Larry Dick, his backup who will start against North Carolina this week, has accounted for 238 yards in two

The Maryland total offense figure of 441.5 yards per game leads N.C. State, which ranks second with a 337.5 average.

Carolina hosts ASU, expects tough match

The UNC varsity soccer team opens its home season today on Fetzer Field at 4 p.m. against the Mountaineers of Appalachian State University. The Heels opened their season Monday with a convincing 4-2 victory over Belmont Abbey.

The Appalachian State team should be quite a test for the Carolina squad that Tar Heel Head Coach Marvin Allen calls "perhaps the best team here since the sixties."

In 1974, ASU lost only to UNC (2-0) and Duke (3-2), while compiling a 13-2-1 record and claiming the Southern Conference title. The offense, led by All-American Emmanuel Udogu averaged over five goals a game and was backed by a stingy defense that yielded less than a

Though ASU is ranked ninth in the South, the Heels must be considered the favorite. The Mountaineers will be at a disadvantage because Fetzer Field is live grass and ASU's home field is astro-turf. Today's match is also ASU's first game of the season.

Forward Steve Skolsky and halfback Rob Smith remain sidelined with illnesses. Skolsy recently had his appendix removed and Smith is recovering from a bout with mononucleosis. They are working out with the team and are expected to return to the lineup next week. Steve Scott's and Rob Hassold's ankle injuries in Monday's game proved not serious and both will

The goalie situation remains unsettled. Todd Walls played against Belmont, but Allen may wish to test sophomore Lee Horton or freshman Martin Trimble. Allen says he will decide on one goalkeeper by the time the Atlantic Coast Conference schedule begins October 17 against

by Susan Shackelford Sports Editor

A football player today doesn't wear the dingy, colorless uniforms and leather helmet that Johnny Clements did 25 years ago here at UNC.

But to Clements, who played the four record-breaking years of the Charlie "Choo Choo" Justice era in the late 1940's, the bright colors, big numbers and flashy football fashion mean little to the spirit of the sport, which he said is sputtering at best.

Sitting at his desk in Raleigh, where he is Wake County director for health, physical education and recreation, the gray-haired Clements said in a recent interview, "I'd like to see them (today's athletes) learn more than just winning. Yes, I'm talking about deemphasizing. They've made tootball into a big business.

"I'm not downing athletics," the former backfield player qualified. "I think it may be the last ditch for any discipline in this "Football did everything for me. It gave me confidence-a sense of responsibility and a determination to stick things out," he said.

Clements came to Carolina after serving in the Navy in World War II. "I only weighed 155 pounds," he said, "but my high school coach told me (Head Coach) Carl Snavely would play small men."

Clements practiced with the squad in the winter and spring of 1946, lived with 40 others in Kenan Fieldhouse, and got so football coaches is also a bad concept. "If the discouraged the last few weeks before the coach was a member of the faculty, he would summer that he almost quit.

But in August when formal tryouts were held, the 5-8 freshman returned to Chapel Hill and made the squad. He was thankful for his earlier workouts since Snavely was faced with trimming the team from the 115-120 who tried out.

Clements soon earned a scholarship and started playing alongside fellow frosh, Justice, and other UNC greats, Hosea Rodgers, Walt Pupa and Art Weiner. During their four years, Carolina accumulated a 39-9-2 record and went to three bowl games, UNC's first such trips.

"We had a good time," Clements said. "but you can make football your god and that's what's happened today."

Specifically, he noted, "What I see going on today is the idea that you have to teach hate. One college has the letters, h-a-t-e, to start their signals for a certain play. They've taken a great game and put the emphasis on

Clements said the non-faculty status of not have the same kind of pressure from alumni. The alumni are too powerful in determining a school's athletic program.

'Now, a University brings in 12 coaches and it has, in effect, created a football department." Clements, a coach for 12 years at N.C. State, said. "Today, athletics also take too much of a student's time. Players spend too many hours in meetings. That's why I got out of coaching."
