

WASHINGTON - President Ford, voicing dissatisfaction over congressional cuts in defense spending, said today America's military strength is more important than any other government program.

"I am disappointed that in so many cases these defense recommendations, for this reason or that, have been cut back." Ford said in remarks prepared for delivery at a Washington Navy Yard ceremony, marking the U.S. Navy's 200th birthday.

"What expense item in our federal budget is more important?" he asked.

In his speech, Ford pledged to keep the Navy and America's other armed forces the strongest in the world.

"I will resist scuttling the U.S. Navy by every means open to me," he said. "I reject any advice to pull down the Stars and Stripes and sail home to a home port . . . we will neither furl the flag nor abandon hope.

"It is not the time to dismantle our defenses," he said.

Wiretapping is "commonplace"

WASHINGTON - Former law enforcement officers and wiretap experts testified Thursday that illegal bugging is commonplace in the United States and neither the Justice Department nor the FBI seem interested in stopping it.

In testimony before the House Intelligence Committee, witnesses told of electronic snooping by both law enforcement and private detective agencies, described a lively commercial trade in surveillance equipment and alleged the telephone companies, the FBI and the Justice Department know what is going on.

Meanwhile, the Senate Intelligence Committee granted immunity to former CIA scientist Sidney Gottlieb and summoned him to a closed session to explain why he did not follow presidential orders to destroy the CIA's stock of poisons in 1970. The cache was found intact a few months ago.

Western diplomats considered the selection of a leading Soviet dissident for the prestigious award as an undisguised slap at the Soviet leadership which is known to have been pushing Finnish President Urho Kekkonen for the prize.

The diplomats recalled Moscow's furor over the awarding of the 1970 Nobel prize for literature to Russian dissident author Alexander Solzhenitsyn and predicted an ever louder outcry over Sakharov.

Sakharov is a brilliant physicist who was called "father of the Soviet H-bomb," for his work on the Russian thermonuclear weapon. But he later became a strong opponent of all nuclear testing.

The prize carries a cash award of $122,000 this year. The Nobel prize award ceremony is scheduled for Dec. 10 in Stockholm and the diplomats considered it virtually certain Sakharov would not be allowed to collect it in person.

Sakharov said Thursday he hoped the presenting of the award to him would "support the battle for human rights" in the Soviet Union and renewed his call for an amnesty for Soviet political prisoners.

He said he would attend the award ceremony in Oslo if granted permission by Soviet authorities.

House votes to double deductions for living expenses in Washington

WASHINGTON - The House Ways and Means Committee Thursday voted to more than double the maximum tax deductions congressmen may take for living expenses in Washington.

Committee members, apparently selfconscious over the new break they were voting for themselves, repeatedly said they were seeking only the same business tax deductions now allowed businessmen traveling out of town.

The tax-writing committee also approved changes in tax law which would result in increased tax breaks for most state legislators.
