ever been killed as a result of it. But he said recent information has forced him to reevaluate his position on the issue. "When I read that we are the only state that has such a law, it indicates that we are out of step with the rest of the country," he said. "I would change my vote if and when it comes up again."

Walker said he could not predict the outcome of a new repeal bill, if one is again introduced in the General Assembly but noted that increased research and information could change votes.

However, Vickery said the statute is already well understood by the legislature. "Everybody understands what it is and what it does," he said.

Scatterfield said the Attorney General's Office supports the law but with some modifications. He said the law should be revised to state that only suspects of capital crimes (first-degree murder and rape in North Carolina) could be declared outlaws. "It (the law) is useful because the family of the person declared an outlaw will work very hard to get the person to turn himself in before he gets shot," Scatterfield said.

Sen. Julian Allsbrook, D-Halifax, said, "One of the main benefits of the law is that it is a means of apprehending criminals without violence."

He said charges that the law is unconstitutional are not applicable. "If a policeman shoots an escaping criminal he is doing his constitutional duty," he said. "It is the same with private citizens protecting themselves."

Allsbrook voted against the repeal bill in the last legislature and said he would do so again if it came up again.

Sen. Carl D. Thorough, D-Forsyth, also voted to retain the law. He said the law is an excellent way for the law enforcement agents to get cooperation in a manhunt.

He said he voted to retain the law because no one has ever been injured under the statute, and he doubts if anyone ever would be.

"There is nothing to back up that claim (that the law is unconstitutional)," he said.

Thorough said he does not think the law will be repealed unless more information or case histories of abuse are presented to the legislature.

State Supreme Court Chief Justice Suzie Sharp refused to comment on the law, saying, "The case may come up and I can't give an opinion."

However, a Superior Court judge in Hillsborough, Edwin Preston Jr., said the law has to be handled very carefully because of the permanent effect it may have. He said he has never declared anyone an outlaw and doubts that any judge has done so in Orange County.

GERRY COHEN FOR MAYOR

—I've tried to run an open campaign. I believe that honesty and frankness with the voters will do the best for democracy in the long run. My positions on public transit, daycare, and increasing minority and student involvement are programs, not platitudes

—I have the time, the energy, and the commitment to be your mayor. My experience on the Board of Aldermen gives me the knowledge to help solve our problems. Now, I ask for your vote for Mayor so that we may work on solutions together.

BOB EPTING

PROGRESSIVE LEADERSHIP FOR CHAPEL HILL

WHO IS ROBERT EPTING?

CANDIDATE Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen, November 4, Town Election

CHAPEL HILL Robert Epting came to Chapel Hill in 1963; now it's his home.

EDUCATION Robert Epting received his A.B. degree from Chapel Hill in 1967; he received his law degree from UNC Law School in 1970, and wrote for the North Carolina Law Review

EARLY LIFE Robert Epting was born in High Point in 1945; he attended High Point Central High School, where he was a member of the National Honor Society and was on the football, track and wrestling teams. He was a member of the Emmanuel Lutheran Church.

PROFESSION Robert Epting has practiced law in Chapel Hill since 1972, and is a partner in the law firm of Epting and Hackney. He is Vice President of the Orange County Bar Association, and is a member of the ACLU, the American Trial Lawyers Association and the North Carolina Academy of Trial Lawyers. He is a member of the American Bar Association and its Section on Individual Rights and Responsibilities. He was a member of the faculty of the Institute of Government before entering law practice here.

ACTIVITIES Robert Epting is a member of the Conservation Council of North Carolina and the Sierra Club. Locally he has concerned himself with troubled youths, has served as President of the Board of Directors of Janus House and has counselled with the Genesis House program and residents. He has been active in the campaign against the death penalty.

WHY ROBERT EPTING FOR CHAPEL HILL?

PROGRESSIVE Robert Epting approves of the progressive, hard working, forward looking town government we have had in Chapel Hill, and he believes it ought to be continued.

PLANNING Robert Epting believes in planning for the growth of Chapel Hill through long range zoning policies which will not encourage more development than the town can serve.

Robert Epting believes we should see that sewage treatment facilities are upgraded and extended to all present taxpayers before we agree to serve outside developments.

Robert Epting believes operation of the bus system is a long step toward the desirable goal of reducing the town's choking dependence on the automobile, and that increased use of the bus system ought to be encouraged.

Robert Epting believes that bikeways and greenbelts should be integral parts of any thoroughfare plan for Chapel Hill.

PARTNERSHIP Robert Epting believes that students, faculty and administration of the University are important parts of the town and that their participation in town decision-making ought to be encouraged.
