From the wires of United Press International

WASHINGTON—The Senate, taking up the big defense spending bill, Thursday turned back liberal attempts to delay flight tests of Cruise missiles and slash $161.3 million for four flying command post aircraft.

On a 52-34 vote, the Senate defeated an amendment by Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., to eliminate the command post item from the measure, and to hold planned procurement to 11 instead of 34.

Eagleton argued that the additional 13 aircraft were unnecessary because they were intended for NATO allies who made no commitment to buy them.

"What this boils down to is whether NATO is going to buy them or not. They'll ride it, and stroke it and love it, but they won't buy it," he said, "because they are too tight with a buck to squander it on this 14 carat white elephant."

But Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., argued the United States needs a strong conventional defense, and remained hopeful the Europeans would come around to buying the special Boeing 707 aircraft.

Earlier, the Senate defeated, 55 to 33, an amendment by Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., which would have forced the Pentagon to delay flight tests on Cruise missiles—pilotless bombers—until Sept. 30, 1976.

Ford urged to select woman

WASHINGTON—Urged by his wife and other feminists to nominate a woman, President Ford said through White House spokesmen Thursday he will pick "the best qualified person" to succeed Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas.

At least one woman—Carla Hills, the secretary of housing and urban development—seemed likely to be a top candidate. Half a dozen others also cropped up in Washington speculation over who might become the first female Supreme Court justice.

Betty Ford told reporters she had a chat with the President and informed him of her wish that he select a female successor to Douglas, who retired suddenly Wednesday for reasons of health. Asked Ford's reaction, she smiled and said, "we'll see."

"There are so many women judges who fill the bill," she said, and one of them could be "the best person for the job."

Ford, however, remained strictly noncommittal on the subject of potential nominees—an issue which could become a political hot potato—and White House spokesmen said he began his talent search by looking over a list of potential candidates prepared Thursday by the Justice Department.

Carey meets legislature

ALBANY, N.Y.—Gov. Hugh L. Carey met with legislative leaders Thursday to hammer out agreement on new taxes, state budget cuts and a moratorium on New York City's debt amid indications President Ford was easing up on his opposition to federal aid for the nation's largest city.

The leaders worked under the pressure of New York City's fiscal crisis, the impending default by Yonkers—the state's fourth largest city—and the deep financial troubles of four state agencies.

The Yonkers and the agency problems stemmed from their inability to borrow in a municipal bond market thrown into disarray by New York City's fiscal crisis.

New York City, according to Carey's fiscal experts, could be kept from default only through the end of the month without approval of the plan.

A key element in the plan is the exchange of up to $3 billion of the city's debts for long-term bonds of the special state agency created last June to help the city meet its cash needs.

But despite the drastic steps proposed by Carey, the Democratic governor said success of the plan would depend of President Ford's decision to approve federal loan guarantees for the city.

In Washington, presidential press secretary Ron Nessen suggested Thursday that Ford was dropping his total opposition to federal aid to keep the city solvent.

Ford to visit N.C. Friday

RALEIGH, N.C.—President Ford, facing an expected tough fight with Ronald Reagan in the North Carolina presidential primary, visits the state Friday for the fourth time since entering the White House.

Ford planned to spend more than two hours shaking hands and making a brief luncheon speech at the state Republican Convention in Raleigh during a trip that will also carry him to Atlanta.

He was scheduled to motor to nearby Durham, 20 miles west on Interstate 40, for an address at North Carolina Central University, a state-supported school with a 90 per cent black enrollment before going to the convention.

Hillel to demonstrate at game

Plan to protest treatment of Russian Jews

by Polly Howes Staff Writer

A solidarity demonstration against Soviet treatment of Jews is planned for Saturday's UNC-Russian National Team basketball game by members of the Chapel Hill Hillel Foundation.

The group will meet at 4 p.m. at the Hillel Foundation on Cameron Avenue and walk to Carmichael Auditorium, where the demonstration will be held.

David Lehrer, coordinator of the demonstration, said Thursday he expects between 30 and 100 participants in the demonstration.

"We are not protesting the game or the Russian team," Lehrer said. "The point we'd like to make is that the Soviet government sends to the U.S. sports teams, the Soviet circus, the ballet and other cultural groups to make people here think well of the U.S.S.R."

"We want people to know that the government that sends the basketball team to the United States, is the same government that sends Jews to Siberia."

Lehrer said the group believes U.S.-Soviet detente is important but that Americans should know the negative aspects of the Soviet Union as well as the positive ones.
