Intelligence staffs decreased by half

WASHINGTON-The CIA and other U.S. intelligence agencies have cut their manpower nearly in half during the last seven years, Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield disclosed Monday.

Mansfield said he was informed recently that intelligence personnel has been reduced from 142,000 to 80,000 since 1969-a cut of about 43 per cent.

"It's a trend in the right direction," Mansfield said in an interview. "It's not the number you need so much as the quality." "And intelligence activities can still be reduced more," he said. Mansfield, who received the information recently, said he had not asked the reason for the sharp cutback in manpower. He also said he did not know-but assumed-there had been a reduction in intelligence spending due to the manpower retrenchment. White House press secretary Ron Nessen meanwhile said President Ford had reached some decisions on reforming the CIA and other intelligence agencies during the weekend but gave no indication of what they Ford met with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, outgoing CIA director William Colby and other intelligence community leaders Saturday.

"Some decisions were made following that meeting," Nessen said.

White House sources said some proposals will go to Congress later this month but others will never be made public.

Pamlico County Sheriff Leyland Brinson said all but one of the defendants remained in jail Monday afternoon on bonds ranging from $15,000 to $75,000. He added that some of the other suspects were attempting to arrange bond.

All are charged in federal warrants with conspiracy to smuggle marijuana.

Fifty-five state, local and federal agents carried out the raid shortly after midnight Sunday in a remote location on the Pamlico River.

They seized a 112-foot fishing trawler registered as the Lillian B, a 28-foot power boat, four vehicles, a house trailer and impounded a fishing shack where the trawler was docked. Officials said the seizure of the 25 tons of marijuana was the largest ever in North Carolina and one of the largest in the

Sanford didn't have heart attack

Candidate Terry Sanford suffered a heart

"Following extensive diagnostic tests and a complete physical examination of former Gov. Terry Sanford, (doctors) report no evidence of either a heart attack or coronary artery disease," a hospital spokesman said.

Sanford was told by Drs. Chester E. Clark and Richard J. Hannah to remain hospitalized another night "as a common sense precaution," forcing cancellation of a four-day campaign swing through New Hampshire.

Sanford was admitted to the hospital after private reception in Marblehead. His press secretary, David Ethridge, said Sanford had

All tests which have been run are normal and they've run all the tests. As a common sense precaution, Sanford will spend another night in the hospital for observation and will undergo routine tests Tuesday morning, Ethridge said.

death came at her home in Wallingford, 25 miles outside London. She had been unwell since she broke her hip a year ago and had been bedridden for some months. Dama Agatha-the queen honored her with that title-wrote 88 published books which sold approximately 400 million copies, and her most famous detective creations were the white-haired village spinster Miss Jane Marple and sauve, moustachioed Belgian Hercule Poirot. She killed off Poirot in the best seller "Curtain" published in 1975 but she outlived Miss Marple who will meet her end in an as yet unnamed book that is now awaiting publication in England.

Miss Marple's observation of her fellow residents in the village of St. Mary Meade enabled her to help police solve crimes without dropping a stitch in her knitting Poirot, a dapper octogenarian Belgian with: waxed moustache, may have been more famous. Some literary critics rated him as fiction's most celebrated sleuth after Sherlock Holmes

In addition to her mystery novels she wrote 17 plays and poetry. One of her plays, "The Mouse Trap," is in its 24th year on the London stage, the longest running play in British history.

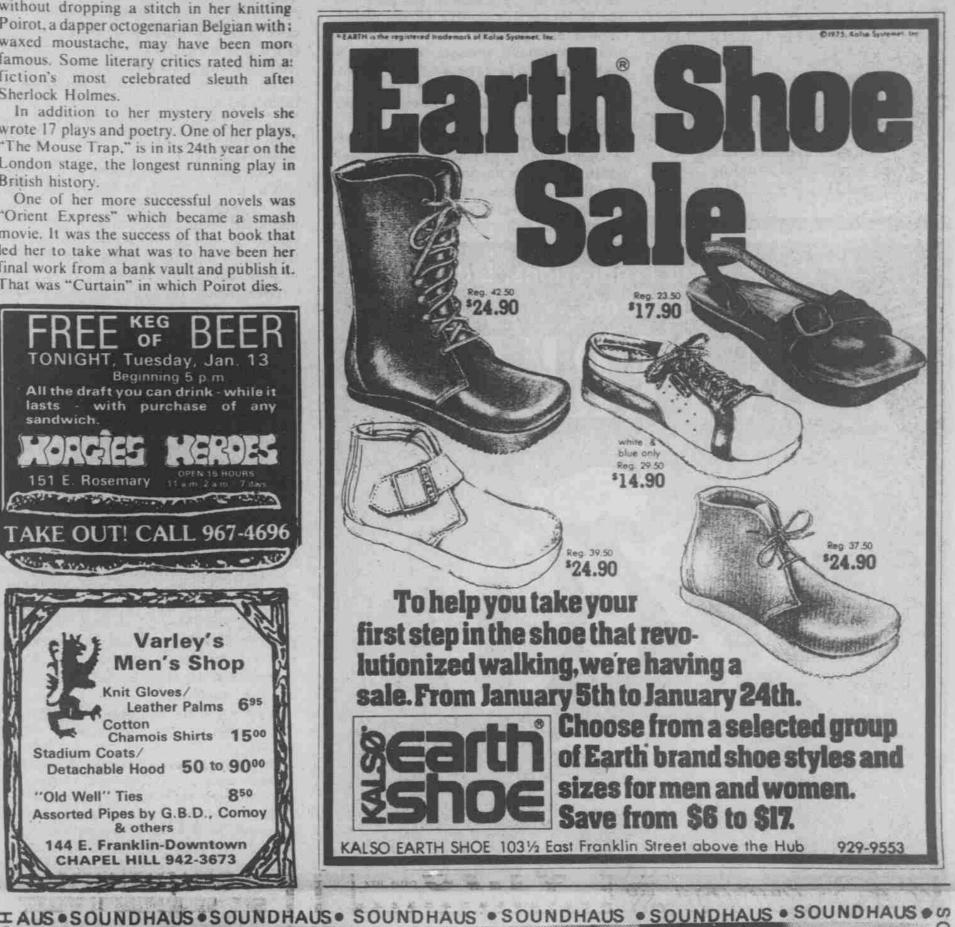

One of her more successful novels was "Orient Express" which became a smash movie, It was the success of that book that led her to take what was to have been her final work from a bank vault and publish it. That was "Curtain" in which Poirot dies.
