

Golfers hope to live up to '76 potential

The UNC women's golf team has quite a record to protect going into its third year of competition.

Under head coach Dorothy Gunnells, the Tar Heels captured the state championship last season and posted a 9-0 dual match record. Last fall, they won their only two matches and finished first in the Mary Baldwin Women's Invitational. While impressive, those credentials don't completely indicate the team's full potential.

The Tar Heels lost none of last year's starters and add three freshmen, Sherry Marsh, Laura Strippel and Sue Ward to the roster. They will challenge juniors Susan Billingham and Maura Stokes and senior Kathy Sinopoli for the Nos. 3, 4 and 5 in the starting lineup. Sally Austin and Mindy Moore, also juniors, will occupy the top two positions.

The Carolina women recently competed in the Rollins Invitational to open the season and hosted the Tar Heel Invitational Thursday at Finley Golf Course. The regular season gets underway Tuesday in Durham when UNC, Duke and Appalachian State do battle in a tri-match.

"It's just a matter of the freshmen getting out and playing and gaining experience," said Gunnells. "I think our upperclassmen will be steady."

Women open net season with OSU

Talent, confidence, depth and experience — most teams are fortunate to possess any two of those qualities. For any questions concerning the UNC women's netters, however, "all of the above" is the only correct answer. Their special recipe calls for a blending of all four ingredients.

After posting an 8-2 fall record, UNC Head Coach Frances Hogan and her squad begin the spring segment of its season Saturday by entertaining Ohio State at 10 a.m. on the Hinton James courts.

Depth, explained Hogan, is the key to the Carolina cause. Sophomore Camey Timberlake and senior Jane Preyer were both injured during the fall season, but they'll be ready for the spring matches. "Jane and Camey both have a lot of experience and are playing well. They'll be in the top four of singles and will play doubles," said Hogan.

The other two players contending for the No. 1 singles position are freshman Susie Black and sophomore Suzanne Bowron. Black was the most effective starter during the fall season, going 8-1 in her matches. Bowron is the Alabama state women's champion.

Nina Cloaninger and Rebecca Garcia round out the singles lineup. Jean Scott, Bitsy Leach, Lisa Dodson, Mary Kay McCormick, and Dianne Sites should also see action this year.

The first doubles team consists of Preyer and Cloaninger. Timberlake and Garcia will be second doubles partners, while Black and Bowron will start in the third slot.

After finishing fourth out of 22 schools in the Florida Invitational over spring break, Hogan is looking forward to the season.

"We really should be stronger than we were in the fall. Jane is back, injuries are healed and everyone has more experience," she said. "I'm very optimistic."

Spring track minus key performers

by Doug Clark
Staff Writer

The UNC track team opens its spring season Saturday on Fetzer Field when it hosts ACC rival Clemson in a dual meet, beginning at 1:30.

"As a dual meet team, we've got problems," said UNC Head Coach Joe Hilton, whose team finished second to Maryland in the ACC indoor championships. However, the Tar Heels beat Maryland at the NCAA meet in Detroit last week on the basis of Ralph King's fifth place performance in the mile. The Terps failed to place anyone.

The Heels were hurt during the indoor season when top sprinter Reggie Jones withdrew from school. In outdoor track, the problem becomes more acute with the addition of the 100, 220 and 440-yard relay events, whereas indoor track has only the 60 among the short distances.

Pat Riley, the only regular sprinter, long jumper Dennis Quick, hurdlers Chip Wilson and Chris Cox, and quarter-milers Reggie Brown and Chuck Hayes will have to take up the slack.

Spring football has also put a dent in the Heels' line-up, claiming shotputter Mike Salzano and sprinter Alan Caldwell through April 10. Slight injuries to quarter-milers Charles Matheson and Hayes have further added to Hilton's problems. In addition, Tommy Ward, who finished second in the mile in the indoor ACC championships, dropped out of school this week.

In other key events, Dave Robinson will pole vault, Henry Jones will run the mile, John McCabe will high jump and will run the 880, and All-America King the three-mile.

Miscues aid UNC win, 3-1

UNC recorded two unearned runs in the eighth inning when Steve Rackley scored from first on two Old Dominion errors and Chris Knepp scored from third on Jimmy Baldwin's bunt to break a 1-1 tie and send the Heels to a 3-1 victory Thursday at Boshamer Stadium. Randy Warrick gave UNC a 1-0 lead in the sixth when he crossed via two Don Hauch wild pitches, while Alan Price notched Old Dominion's run in the eighth on Bob Thomson's two wild pitches. Thomson was the winning pitcher. Carolina, now 4-7, hosts Pembroke today at 2:30 p.m.

Carolina's No. 6 nationally-ranked men's golf team will be entered in the Iron Duke Classic Sunday and Monday on the Duke University golf course. The Heels are coming off two consecutive second place finishes behind Wake Forest.

The UNC lacrosse team defends its 2-1 season record Saturday when it travels to Washington and Lee in Lexington, Va.

UNC's men's tennis team plays Southeastern Conference champion Tennessee in Knoxville today. The junior varsity team hosts Woodberry Park at 2 p.m. today on the James courts.

UNC fencers A.J. Keane, Dan Strait, Rick Killian, Alan Knight, Ken Williams and assistant coaches Jim Scott and Charley Brown will compete in the annual Martini and Rossi International Invitational Fencing Tournament this weekend in New York City.
