Markham elected FCR head

by Art Eisenstadt Staff Writer

DAVIDSON—Doug Markham, a UNC sophomore, was elected general chairman of the N.C. Federation of College Republicans during the organization's spring convention Saturday.

Markham, a political science-speech major from Goldsboro and former governor of Granville Towers, defeated John Molen, a UNC law student, 36-20. Delegates from seven schools attended the convention.

"I believe we ought to change the focus of the federation from what it has been in the past—a matter of winning arguments and having small clubs that were personal power fiefdoms," Markham said. "We need to establish more active clubs, so we can start winning elections and supporting good candidates in the fall."

As chairman of the state federation, Markham will sit on the central committee of the N.C. Republican party. The federation is composed of College Republican Clubs at 11 North Carolina colleges and universities.

Other officers from UNC elected during the convention were Eric Evenson, junior
