No Rain

The skies will be mostly clear today, with a zero per cent chance of rain. The low temperature last night was in the low 50s, and the high today is expected to reach the upper 80s.

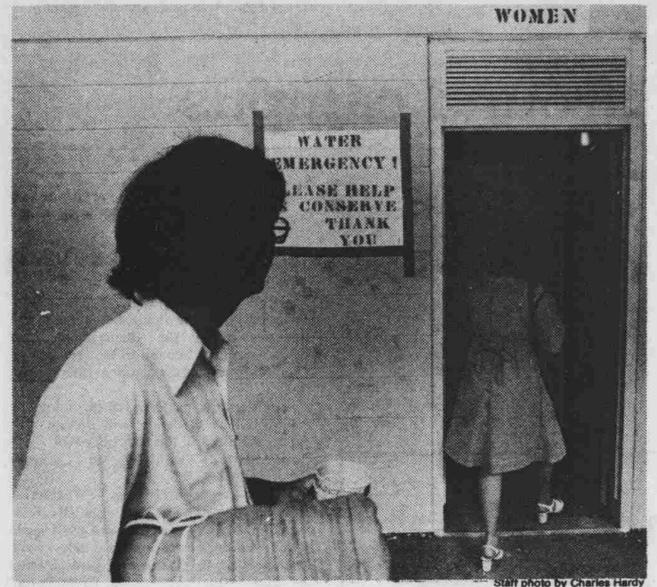

With a story or picture idea call: 933-0245, 933-0246, 933-0252. For the business or advertising offices call: 933-1163.

Please call us

Volume No. 84

Wednesday, September 8, 1976, Chapel Hill, North Carolina

Issue No. 9

Thirty-four thousand football fans were asked not to flush toilets during the UNC-Miami game because of the water shortage.

Proposal for law school panels could affect student appointees

by Chuck Alston Staff Writer

A controversial proposal to change the procedure for appointing student representatives to faculty committees will face the law school faculty at its first open meeting Thursday.

Four law school faculty members are sponsoring a proposal to strip the Student Bar Association (SBA) Board of Governors' right to appoint students to faculty committees.

Jon Eddy, Peter Glenn, John Martin and Dickson Phillips, law school faculty members, are seeking to give the power to appoint student committee members to the dean of the law school.

The faculty meeting is scheduled for 1 p.m. Thursday in the faculty lounge of the law school.

Eddy and Glenn refused to comment on the reasons behind the proposed change. Martin and Phillips could not be reached for comment.

The law faculty meeting Thursday is the first one since the SBA Board of Governors and six students filed suit on April 6 of this year to open the faculty meetings to the public.

A preliminary injunction issued on June 18 by Judge Edwin S. Preston of the 15th Judicial District Superior Court in Hillsborough requiring the law faculty to comply with N.C. public meeting laws is under appeal by the N.C. Attorney General's Office.

Student members serve on six committees in the law school: curriculum, placement, buildings and grounds, library, grades and exams, and student aid.

Under the present system, students are selected through a sign-up and interview procedure conducted by the SBA Board of Governors to fill spots on faculty committees in proportion to the number of faculty members appointed by the dean.

SBA Board of Governors President Ran Coble said, "I hope we can prevent them from passing it. The elected representatives of the students should be the group which decides who represents the student body on the committees."

Dean Robert Byrd of the law school said he will support the proposal. "It does not weaken the student representation. It does not change the numbers, and I think I can select representative students," he added.

As of Tuesday, Byrd had not decided whether students would be allowed to speak at the faculty meeting.

"Students have an opportunity to deliver input by writing, but there is no provision that recognizes anyone other than faculty to speak," Byrd said.

Byrd plans to notify Coble of his final

added. Water consumption hits

Four members protest session

Aldermen study water shortage

low on game weekend

by Chip Pearsall Staff Writer

The Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen last night voted 5 to 4 to adjourn a special session of the board without taking action to charge the University with a violation of the water ordinance.

Four members of the board voiced the meeting was unnecessary and

Aldermen Robert Epting, Thomas Gardner, Jonathan Howes and Shirley Marshall attended the meeting under

Water consumption

Total consumption Monday From University Lake From Durham Level of University Lake

The tiebreaking vote to adjourn was cast by Chapel Hill Mayor James C. Wallace.

Four of the eight aldermen attended the meeting under protest.

Aldermen Ed Vickery and R. D. Smith called the special meeting of the board "to discuss whether further actions are required by the town with respect to the water supply-demand situation," but in Vickery's opening statement he indicated that he wanted to hear discussion on the following points:

• resolving how much water is in University Lake after conflicting figures had been presented by the media.

· hearing additional ideas on water conservation.

 seeking more active enforcement of water ordinance measures.

· taking action toward UNC with regard to the watering incident at Navy Field.

their objections to the special meeting, and Wallace indicated that he thought possibly counterproductive.

3.8 million gallons .6 million gallons 3.2 million gallons 57 per cent full (down 60 inches) protest. Wallace also protested the meeting when he signed the attendance ledger.

"Although I am receptive to any ideas people have regarding ideas for water conservation measures, I don't think a special meeting of the aldermen is appropriate," Wallace said.

Wallace said later that he thought the called meeting would have developed into "a shouting match" on the issue of taking action against the University for the watering of Navy Field last week, and he said during the meeting that "the process of culprit-finding is not in the best interests of the people."

Alderman Gerry Cohen had said that the violation represented "an act of contempt for the water ordinance by the University," and Alderman R. D. Smith had asked for "equal justice under the ordinance."

After discussion by each member of the board and the mayor, Epting moved to adjourn the meeting, and the motion carried.

After the meeting, Vickery said he was satisfied that the board had accurate figures on the amount of water left in University Lake but added that he was disappointed that the board had "ended open debate on the watering incident."

Vickery said he learned from Wallace after the meeting that the University had offered to pay the $100 fine for the misdemeanor if it would serve a useful purpose.

"I would be satisfied that the water ordinance was being enforced if the University took this action," Vickery said.

Ed Vickery Town alderman

Water consumption in Chapel Hill during the football weekend fell to its lowest level since water conservation measures began, Grey Culbreth, director of UNC utilities, said Tuesday.

Consumption dropped to 3.7 million gallons Saturday, confirming Culbreth's earlier prediction that holding football games in Kenan Stadium would not increase water use in Chapel Hill.

Culbreth said that although many students left town because of the Labor Day holiday, the weekend's consumption figures forecast a pattern that will continue during football game weekends.

"People don't use as much water at football games as they would if they stayed at home," Culbreth said. He added that conservation measures taken at the stadium "were so generous I couldn't ask them to do any more."

decision on student speakers by 9 a.m. today.

power of numbers, I'd like as many students as possible to attend the faculty meeting to

The four cosponsors of the proposal

"The purpose of this meeting is threefold," Coble said. "We want to discuss the present system by which students are appointed, get the student response on what they would have us do and tell the students

Eight of the 10 members on the Board of Governors compaigned jointly on a slate of issues and were elected by the biggest

"Other committees need to demonstrate that they have the same kind of support," he turnout in law school history, Coble said.

about the faculty meeting Thursday."

declined an invitation to speak today at the law school and outline their views. Eddy said the cosponsors declined independently.

show their disapproval," Coble said.

"Since the only power we have is in the Consumption on Sunday was 3.4 million gallons, the lowest daily figure since conservation measures were started in early August.

Chapel Hill's pipeline connection to the Durham water system was completed Monday and pumped an additional 1.3 million gallons to the two million gallons per day Durham has been supplying since Aug.

Culbreth said that as much as 3.3 million gallons per day can be obtained from Durham as long as the city can spare the water from its system. He added that the extra water will decrease the amount taken from University Lake.

Peaceful march protests racism in N.C.

by Elliott Potter Staff Writer

RALEIGH-Approximately 3,000 demonstrators marched peacefully down the streets of Raleigh Monday to protest racism and repression in North Carolina.

The turnout for the mile-long march was smaller than organizers predicted. Last week they said that 12,000 demonstrators would show up for the protest. By Sunday, their estimates had fallen to 8,000.

Marchers from as far away as California, Illinois and Colorado came to protest the revival of the death penalty, imprisonment of civil rights leaders in North Carolina jails, and the state's "right to work" laws.

At the rally following the march, Angela

Davis, cochairperson of the National Alliance against Racist and Political Repression, formally announced boycotts of the state's tourist industry and of J. P. Stevens textiles.

Led by Davis, the protesters circled thorugh the streets of the capital, assembling in the park behind the North Carolina State Archives and History building.

The marchers stopped in front of the Governor's Mansion where they heard Jim Grant, a "Charlotte 3" defendant, Chapel Hill lawyer Jerry Paul and family members of imprisoned civil rights leaders echo pleas to Gov. James Holshouser.

Gov. Holshouser was vacationing with his family in Boone.

Elizabeth Chavis, mother of imprisoned "Wilmington 10" member Rev. Ben Chavis, read a letter Chavis had written from Central Prison.

"As we struggle together we all must be vigilant and we must be militant; we must be peaceful, but we must remain forceful,"

Chavis wrote in his letter. The march climaxed with a rally which featured speeches by Davis and Ga. State Sen. Julian Bond. Bond urged the crowd to accept only the candidates for political office who support the redistribution of income and wealth through an altering of the tax structure. Bond also encouraged support of full employment programs and a national health insurance plan.

"Our problem is this-how far and in what way can we consciously and scientifically guide our future to insure our physical survival, our spiritual freedom and our social growth. Either we do this or we die" Bond told the protesters.

The crowd, subdued and weary during most of the afternoon program, frequently came to its feet during Davis' remarks. Her attacks on Sen. Jesse Helms brought loud responses from the crowd. The black activist said that Helms would be one of the main targets of a new wave of protests by Alliance members.

Davis told the marchers that their strength hinged on their unity. Organization makes unity possible, she said.

Davis announced that the N.C. Alliance was opening a permanent office in Raleigh to maintain pressure on state legislators.

The streets of Raleigh were nearly deserted as the protesters marched under a warm Labor Day sun. The marchers cahnted, "Free the 'Wilmington 10' and the 'Charlotte 3'," "stop the executions" and "freedom, now" as they circled around several state government office buildings.

The march was without incident. Both city and state officials praised the organizers of the demonstration. The 1,000 National Guardsmen called by Gov. Holshouser remained at the N.C. State Fairgrounds where they were stationed for the weekend.

Michael Myerson, coordinator of the march considered the protest a success. "We reached thousands of people just organizing the march," he said. "In a day when people say that marches are no longer useful, we used this effort to set a sound base for future drives and activities in North Carolina."

Ehrlichman ordered to begin prison term

WASHINGTON (UPI)-John D. Ehrlichman, once a top White House aide to Richard M. Nixon, was ordered Tuesday to surrender to federal officials Sept. 17 and begin serving up to five years for a break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

by Gene Upchurch Assistant Sports Editor

As the fans left Kenan Stadium Saturday, some of them were smiling. Others were hugging and congratulating each other on what they considered a game well played.

threatening. The ball was on Carolina's 19 yard line when Redskin quarterback Larry Fortner flicked a short pass over the middle right at the goal line. As the crowd held its breath for what seemed an eternity, as the ball was batted into the air by UNC's John Daw and brought down by linebacker Mike Finn as the clock ran out The crowd was pleased in the early moments when Carolina's defense stopped Miami's first drive after only four plays. But the game soon began to remind fans of last year, when Miami moved 50 yards in 10 plays to set up a 27yard field goal by Fred Johnson, to make the score 3-0 with 7:10 remaining in the first quarter. Carolina's first score came when Dooley's assistants convinced him to try a little trick he hadn't used since 1967. Quarterback Bernie Menapace faked a leg injury, and while he knelt on the ground, he pitched the ball to wingback Mel Collins, who streaked 69 yards for a touchdown to put Carolina in the lead 7-3 (see related story, page 6). But before the clock ran out in the first half, Miami answered with a score of its own. The Redskins moved the ball all the way to the one-yard line in eight plays, Please turn to page 6

In its home opener, the UNC football team pleasantly surprised most of its fans when it held off a last-minute attack by the tough Miami of Ohio Redskins to win 14-10. The Tar Heels won their home opener last year over William and Mary 33-7, but the fans didn't have much else to cheer about because the Heels didn't win another home game all season en route to a 3-7-1 record.

Carolina fans were happy Saturday because their team had defeated a tough Miami team in a game that UNC Coach Bill Dooley had called the toughest opener during his tenure. Ranked among the top 20 teams in the nation in some polls, Miami was coming off an 11-1 season (32-1-1 over the past three years) and had All-America candidate Rob Carpenter at the tailback position.

But the outcome of the game came down to literally the last seconds. With four seconds remaining, Carolina was leading the game, but Miami was Linebacker Chuck Austin congratulates quarterback Bernie Menapace following Menapace's successful execution of the "Swinging Gate." No. 58 is defensive lineman Duke Thompson.

Judge Gerhard A. Gesell revoked Ehrlichman's bond and ordered him to serve his sentence of 20 months to five years.

Once one of the nation's most powerful men, Ehrlichman must report to the U.S. marshal here or to the warden of the Federal Prison Camp at Safford, Ariz., where the Bureau of Prisons has ordered him confined.

The bearded Ehrlichman has been living in New Mexico, writing novels and providing legal advice to Indians. He previously was a land-use attorney in Seattle.

Ehrlichman, spotted by a UPI reporter in Santa Fe as he was entering a bookstore and asked about Gesell's order, said, "I have no comment."

The head of the so-called "Plumbers Unit" in the White House, Ehrlichman was convicted July 12, 1974, of conspiring to violate the civil rights of Dr. Lewis Fielding, Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Ellsberg had been standing trial for violating the top secret embargo on the Pentagon Papers and releasing them to the news media. When word of the White House-sanctioned break-in came to light, the case against Ellsberg was dismissed.

Ehrlichman, the number two man on Nixon's staff until forced to resign, was also convicted on Jan. 1, 1975 of one count of conspiracy, one count of obstruction of justice and two counts of making false declarations to a grand jury. He had denied being able to remember various facts in the Watergate break-in and cover-up. Ehrlichman, who has been appealing both decisions, has served no time in jail.