

Phone rates to rise $1; upgradings not cause

by Russell Gardner
Staff Writer

Phone rates will rise $1 per month for local service this spring when Southern Bell Telephone Co. takes over the Chapel Hill Telephone Co., but the increase is not based on plans to upgrade the system, John Temple, assistant vice-chancellor for business and finance, said Wednesday.

"The increase is based strictly on Southern Bell's tariffs for a town the size of Chapel Hill," he said.

Southern Bell's present tariff rate for a town of 25,000 stations (approximately the number of phones in Chapel Hill) is $7.50 per month.

The Chapel Hill Telephone Co., which is now owned by the University, charges $6.50 per month. The system serves the University, Chapel Hill, Carrboro and parts of southern Orange County.

The UNC Board of Trustees last June approved the sale of the telephone system to Southern Bell for approximately $26 million. The sales agreement was approved by the state Utilities Commission and must now be approved by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC). The FCC is expected to approve the sale.

Even though the rate increase is not a result of planned improvements, Southern Bell will still have to improve the Chapel Hill telephone exchange substantially over the next several years, Temple said.

"Southern Bell must decide whether to install electronic equipment to replace the mechanical equipment we're now using or to buy more mechanical equipment to upgrade our system," he said.

He added that the UNC central campus and the hospital both have major telephone requirements that are not being met by the telephone equipment now in use.

"These are requirements Southern Bell will have to address. Installation of millions of dollars worth of equipment in Chapel Hill could affect the phone rates in the area but that's not likely," Temple said. "Southern Bell receives revenue from all over the state that could be used to fund the improvements."

There are a number of minor considerations, including whether to continue use of free local service phones in the Carolina Union and Undergraduate Library, that will be decided after the utility sale.

"We have to assume that the free service you've had in the past will no longer be free. I don't think Southern Bell approves such phones," Temple said.

Southern Bell officials have not informed University officials whether they will approve continued use of the phones.

Library and Student Union funds now support the phones. Each phone costs $12 per month.

Carolina Union Director Howard Henry said Wednesday the Union will continue to fund the phones if Southern Bell approves their continued use.

Alfred Sharlip, assistant University librarian for business and finance, also said the phones will be funded if Southern Bell approves them.

The telephone utility sale is one of four that will get the University out of the commercial utilities business.

The electric utility was sold to Duke Power on Dec. 31 for $14,387,235. By order of the state legislature, $10 million of the sales revenue has been deposited in the state treasury.

The water and sewer utilities which serve the area will be sold to the Orange Water and Sewer Authority (OWASA). That sale has been delayed because of difficulties in working out the details of the process by which bonds will be sold to finance the water and sewer sales, Claiborne Jones, vice chancellor for business and finance, said Wednesday. The sales are expected to take place Feb. 15 and should gross $1.6 million. The Trustees have approved the plans to use the utility sales revenue to upgrade UNC library facilities.

SLS contract to expire

CGC to determine legal aid's fate

by Chip Pearsall
Staff Writer

Student Att. Dorothy Bernholz will go before the Campus Governing Council (CGC) on Jan. 27 to determine whether her contract with Student Government as its first student attorney will be renewed.

Bernholz has served as a free-of-charge attorney for UNC students since last April, when Student Legal Services (SLS), which she designed, was approved by the North Carolina State Bar Council. She signed a one-year contract in January 1976 to serve as legal consultant for Student Government until SLS could be approved, and the contract expires on Jan. 28.

She said Wednesday that she will present three proposals to the CGC regarding the future of the SLS, and whether her contract is renewed depends on the course the CGC decides to take.

"The CGC can choose to continue the service under the present method of operation, discontinue the service or continue in another form," Bernholz said. She added that a new contract would probably be extended only through the end of the semester, when SLS's one-year trial period of operation ends.

"We're trying to get the attorney's contract on the same fiscal arrangement that the rest of the University uses," she said.

Bernholz said that she had not received any indication of whether she would be retained as student attorney, but added "I would hope I could be retained, because I feel that I've provided a valuable service to students since SLS came into being."

In a subjective analysis of the first eight months of SLS's operation that she will present to the CGC, Bernholz points out that over 450 students have been offered advice and, in some cases, courtroom representation when they encountered legal problems. Part of the analysis is based on responses by students who sought aid in October.

"Their responses indicate that they feel the student attorney was helpful, honest and straightforward with them," Bernholz said.

Israelis selling planes to Honduras

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Israel is complicating U.S. diplomacy by selling weapons to South Africa and Chile and may be breaking the law by selling planes with American engines to Honduras, U.S. officials said Wednesday.

They said that this may endanger the virtual alliance between Tel Aviv and Washington, if Congress insists on enforcement of the rule which requires aid to be cut off if Israel is found to be violating U.S. aid laws.

Israel has sold six 20-year-old Super Mystere fighter-bombers with U.S. jet engines to Honduras and is negotiating the sale of six more, officials said.

According to the officials, the Israelis souped up the aging planes by fitting them with U.S. Pratt and Whitney engines salvaged from other planes.

One official said the United States had not given permission for this sale, as would be required by law if the planes contain American parts or technology.

Legal assistance given to students has mostly been in the areas of consumer affairs and landlord-tenant situations, she said. The SLS is empowered to give courtroom representation in these cases, but Bernholz said that she has advised students about a variety of other legal problems.

"I think the Student Legal Services has been an unqualified success so far," Bernholz said. "This kind of program is relatively new, though, and there have been some legal questions arising here and there in other states about the type of plans that can be arranged between student governments and attorneys."

Bernholz and three other plaintiffs filed a complaint on Dec. 14 in Federal District Court challenging a state statute that prohibited the initial SLS program that Bernholz designed.

She said Wednesday that the court ruling would not be made before the Jan. 27 CGC meeting, and the proposals that she makes to the body have been designed with the existing state statute in mind.

Fast credit for Poli Sci 41

The UNC political science department will offer students the opportunity to receive three hours credit for Political Science 41 by passing an examination on Wed., Jan. 19.

The examination will cover a general introduction to American Government. Richard J. Richardson, chairperson of the department of political science, said that students should review an introductory political science textbook before the examination. He recommended The Politics of American Democracy, by Irish and Prothro.

The examination is open to all students. Students now enrolled in Political Science 41 may drop the course if they pass the exam, Richardson said.

The exam will be given from 3-5 p.m. in 100 Hamilton Hall. Interested students should pay a $1.00 non-refundable registration fee to the receptionist on third floor Hamilton Hall by 5 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 18.
