

Dean choice: unrest panel ex-member

By NANCY HARTIS
Staff Writer

The chancellor's reported nominee for the post of dean of the College of Arts and Sciences served on a 1970 Nixon Administration panel investigating student unrest. The panel helped formulate administration policy toward this unrest.

Samuel R. Williamson, 47, also acted as a special consultant to the director of the President's Office of Emergency Preparedness in 1970.

Williamson joined the UNC history department as an associate professor in 1972. Now a full professor, he is also director of the peace, war and defense curriculum.

He presently is studying at Cambridge University in England on a research grant awarded by the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Williamson formerly taught at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point and at Harvard University, where he served as special assistant to the dean and as an Allston Burr Senior Tutor of Kirkland House. While at Harvard, he was also an assistant to Archibald Cox, who later served as Watergate prosecutor.

Samuel R. Williamson

Williamson wrote The Politics of Grand Strategy, which won an American Historical Association Award in 1970.

He is a former Fulbright Scholar, Danforth Fellow, Woodrow Wilson Fellow and Phi Beta Kappa member. He has been awarded several research grants from various institutions, including the Ford Foundation.

A native of Bogalusa, La., he received his B.A. in history from Tulane University and an M.A. and Ph.D. from Harvard University in 1966.

Lecture on childbirth

By KAREN MILLERS
Staff Writer

British anthropologist Shelia Kitzinger is in Chapel Hill this week presenting her views on childbirth and the psychosexual childbirth she has developed.

Kitzinger has studied childbirth in Caribbean, Latin American, East German, South African and western countries, comparing concepts people have of their own body awareness and of childbirth.

Law students reach finals in contest

Three UNC law students will represent the Southeastern region in the national finals of the American Bar Association Client Counseling Competition at Notre Dame March 25-26.

The students advanced to the finals by winning the Southeastern regional competition held here March 5.

Sidney Powell, Russ Roten and Lisa Shepherd of UNC defeated teams from Wake Forest and the University of Tennessee in the final round of regional competition. Teams from the universities of Virginia, Georgia, South Carolina and from North Carolina Central University and Emory University also competed.

For the contest, the students held a simulated client-lawyer counseling session with volunteers acting the role of clients. A group of North Carolina lawyers judged the event.

The UNC team was advised by Peter Glenn and the UNC team from last year, Valerie Powers and Walker Reagen.

"Our cultures of childbirth are different, just as much as religion or anything else," she said. "In western societies childbirth is a disease, and a pregnant woman is a patient."

She said other cultures view it as a developmental process—becoming a mother or a father—and see the labor process as beneficial.

Kitzinger's method seeks to look at childbirth as a normal life crisis. It emphasizes preparing both the woman and the man for childbirth, and coping with the stresses that come before, and after and during labor. She said the method partially arose from some of the concepts of the Lamaze childbirth method.

Kitzinger said one goal of this method is increased self-awareness. The method also seeks to give parents "the ability to give birth actively with understanding and joy rather than to be passive, without knowing what's going on."

Kitzinger has written two books on the subject: The Experience of Childbirth and Giving Birth: The Parents' Emotions in Childbirth.

She will speak on "Childbirth and Mutual Body Awareness" at 1:30 p.m. today in the Clinic Auditorium in N.C. Memorial Hospital.

A career in law—without law school.

What can you do with only a bachelor's degree? Now there is a way to bridge the gap between an undergraduate education and a challenging, responsible career. The Lawyer's Assistant is able to do work traditionally done by lawyers.

Three months of intensive training can give you the skills—the courses are taught by lawyers. You choose one of the seven courses offered—choose the city in which you want to work.

Since 1970, The Institute for Paralegal Training has placed more than 1600 graduates in law firms, banks, and corporations in over 75 cities.

If you are a senior of high academic standing and are interested in a career as a Lawyer's Assistant, we'd like to meet you.

Contact your placement office for an interview with our representative.

We will visit your campus on TUESDAY, MARCH 22
