Hardy Payne Rafshoon Yesulais

Cannes Film Festival... Several UNC professors acted in "The Gardener's Son," a film made in North Carolina which will appear in the Cannes Film Festival in France this spring. Martha Nell Hardy, Earl Wynn, Walter Spearman and Dwight Hunsucker participated in the film.

Hardy, of the UNC speech division, played a small part in the film. "I had really just one line, literally. I was there for three days shooting just to do one line, but that's the way it works," Hardy said.

Production manager for the film, Gerry Byrne, called the film "one of the largest and most valuable television projects to take place in North Carolina." The film was broadcast by PBS January 6 and 8.

Hardy found the film-making to be a tedious process because of the heavy technological portion involved. "But I think the film is very sensitively done and is a beautiful piece, unusual. Only eight actors were job-in actors, and the rest were from North Carolina. This shows great potential for film-making in the state."

Gong Show South... "The First Annual Trash (Can) Show," a takeoff on "The Gong Show," brought some unique UNC talent to center stage recently.

"We used a trash-can lid as the gong," says Hinton James resident adviser

Charlotte Hawkins. "To strike the gong we used a girl's artificial leg. About half of the 15 acts were gonged."

Among those cut short by a hack on the ole garbage-can lid were sophomore Danny Stipe, who hypnotized bricks, and senior Jay Ferrell who sang instrumental arias dressed as an Arab.

First prize (dinner for two at Jordan's) went to Edda Gehkre, an international student from Germany who led a sing-a-long to songs about Hinton James and UNC.

Celebrity judges for the "Trash Show" were Dean of Student Affairs Donald Boulton, Associate Carolina Union Director Archie Copel and Assistant Director of Housing Gere Gilmore.

Beads and Baubles... As a child, Sharon Payne liked to play with her mother's old jewelry. "She'd give me beads and things to play with and I'd take them apart and rearrange them," she says.

Payne, a senior radio, television and motion pictures major from Hillsborough, decided two years ago to turn her jewelry-making hobby into a business. "I tested my work at a family reunion and sold all of it," she said. "But I figured they weren't critical judges, so I tried selling my jewelry on campus."

It sold well, and soon Payne was taking special orders from campus sororities for personalized jewelry bearing sorority symbols. She also has sold her jewelry at two showings in Upendo Lounge and at the Apple Chill Fair.

"I make the jewelry from anything I can get my hands on," Payne said. Seeds, shells, wood, bones, washers and beads made from flour and salt are all used in her creations. She also has started working with silver.

Advertising Carter... Lorne Green, Warren Beatty, Gregg and Cher Allman, Susan Rafshoon, Aretha Franklin... they were all mingling and chatting at a Washington reception the night before Jimmy Carter's inauguration.

Wait a minute? Susan Rafshoon? Is she part of the Hollywood jet-set? Not really. She's a UNC sophomore and a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority.

Her father, Gerald Rafshoon, was responsible for all those commercials during the campaign that showed Carter down on the farm, talking with construction workers, shaking hands and proclaiming the wonders of the peanut. He is now a public-relations consultant to Carter.

The Rafshoons have known the Carters for 11 years. "We used to go down to Plains and stay at Miss Lillian's house. Jimmy seemed like a regular person," Susan Rafshoon said. "I traveled with him up to Chapel Hill two years ago when he spoke at the Survival Symposium."

Disney Director... While the UNC Pep Band was playing "Here Comes Carolina" at the semifinals of the ACC tournament, band director John Yesulais was thinking only of Mickey Mouse, elephants and of being guest conductor of the Disney World band in Florida that same week.

"The Major," as he is called by band members, is chairperson of the board of the American Band Masters Association, an organization of 230 university band directors. The organization recently visited the Barnum and Bailey Circus Museum in Sarasota, Fla., to hear a special performance by the Barnum and Bailey Circus Band. "The purpose was to renew our ties with music way back," said the Major. Circus music was the traditional form of music."
