U.S. business holdings in Southern Africa spark demonstrations at Duke and Raleigh

U.S. involvement with the racist regimes in Rhodesia and South Africa are the target of two demonstrations scheduled in the Triangle area this weekend.

At noon Friday, a rally will be held on the main quadrangle at Duke University. A picket line will form in front of the Federal Building in Raleigh (310 New Bern Ave.) at noon Saturday.

The two demonstrations have distinct purposes, according to protest organizer Gary Sage of Raleigh.

"The rally Friday is against Duke University as an institution," Sage said. Much of the protest against Duke stems from President Terry Sanford's position on the board of directors of International Telephone and Telegraph, a multinational corporation with holdings in South Africa.

U.S. corporations in South Africa follow the government's lead in practicing apartheid, a regimented form of legal segregation.

"The picket line (in Raleigh) is directed to the federal government—to put pressure on them to make U.S. corporations (in South Africa) give up apartheid practices," Sage said.

The picket Saturday is part of a nationwide coalition of demonstrations which will be held this weekend to protest the racist regimes in Southern Africa. The movement is being endorsed nationally by the National Student Coalition Against Racism (NSCAR).

Sage, an NSCAR member, said he sees his organization's position as being similar to antiwar efforts in the early 1960s.

"Ignorance and apathy toward the U.S. position in Southern Africa prevail among the American public, just as such attitudes were expressed toward the Vietnam War in 1965," Sage said.

"We don't expect President Carter is going to give up his support of South African regimes just because of our protests (this weekend)."

According to Sage, NSCAR's objective is to influence public sentiment and to mobilize people against the federal government's support of racist regimes.

PLAIN TALK FROM ARMCO ON FINDING A JOB:

How the energy crisis chills your chances

So you're getting your degree and looking for that perfect job. More power to you. Literally. You'll need it. America will have to find the energy it takes to make you a job.

Expressed as heat, this nation spends at least 71 quads of energy a year. That's 71 quadrillion BTUs. A 71 followed by 15 zeroes. Since one BTU will heat a pound of water one degree Fahrenheit, we're talking about bringing 219 trillion pounds of ice to a boil. That's a glacier thirteen miles long, two miles wide and a mile thick. Every year.

Each working man and woman's share of our 71 quads comes to 800,000,000 BTUs. Of course all that energy isn't spent on the job. Nor do all jobs take the same amount, although most spend more than we think. But when you look at our available energy and the 89,000,000 people at work, then 800,000,000 BTUs is each job's share.

Now think about the 18,000,000 more U.S. men and women experts say will be looking for jobs over the next ten years. At 800,000,000 BTUs apiece, we'll have to come up with an extra 14.4 quads of energy to create new jobs for them.

At Armco, we face the energy problem every day because it takes about 29,000,000 BTUs to make each ton of steel. Our energy bill last year came to over $300,000,000. The cost keeps climbing every year. No wonder companies conserve energy. We have to, even though most of Armco's energy comes from coal which we mine ourselves. When companies can't get energy, people lose their jobs. We all learned that during the winter. The energy crisis is here. And it's huge.

Plain talk about ENERGY

We Americans already know how to solve the energy crisis. We have the technology to reach solutions. Yet each solution comes with its own set of political problems. Natural gas mustn't cost too much. Offshore oil mustn't spoil our beaches. Coal mustn't rape the land or poison the air. The atom mustn't threaten to destroy us. Energy conservation mustn't interfere with spending BTUs for worthy reasons.

Fair enough. But so far, we're paying more attention to the problems than we are to the energy itself. We've got to stop making every social goal an ideological crusade. We need to think things through and make rational trade-offs if we're ever going to get those 18,000,000 additional jobs.

Next time some zealot crusades for anything, test the crusade against this question: Does it produce at least one BTU's worth of energy? If not, it won't do a thing to help you get a job.

Free—Armco's plain talk on how to get a job

We've got a free booklet to help you get a job. Use it to set yourself apart, above the crowd. We answer 50 key questions you'll need to know. Like why you should bone up on companies you like. What to do after the first interview. Hints to make you a more aggressive, attractive job candidate. All prepared for Armco by a consulting firm specializing in business recruiting, with help from the placement staff of a leading university.

Send for your free copy of How to Get a Job. Write Armco Steel Corporation, Educational Relations Dept., General Offices, U-2, Middletown, Ohio 45043. Our supply is limited, so write now.

Armco wants your plain talk about energy and jobs

Does our message make sense? We'd like to know what you think. Your personal experiences. Facts you've found to prove or disprove our point. Drop us a line. We'll send you a more detailed report on energy and jobs. Our offer of How to Get a Job, above, tells you how to write us. Let us hear from you. We've got a stake in more American jobs.
