Carter planning to jawbone on inflation

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Carter administration may be planning to "jawbone" both business and labor to head off possible inflation resulting from the severe winter weather, Senate Democratic whip Alan Cranston said Tuesday.
After a morning meeting among Democratic congressional leaders, Carter, economic advisor Charles Schultze and budget director Bert Lance, Cranston said there were indications the administration wants to discuss with business and labor any inflation actions they may be planning. But he said there was no "arm twisting" in mind.
For its own part, the administration will cope with unexpected economic downturns restricting inflationary government actions such as over-regulation and under-enforcement of antitrust laws, the California senator quoted Schultze as saying.
Cranston said passing the $50 rebate for most taxpayers, the keystone of Carter's economic stimulus package, will be "a tough fight but, in our view, a winnable fight."
Many senators, however, are ready to oppose the rebates unless Carter backs down on his review of certain water projects around the country.
And on Capitol Hill, Senate majority leader Robert Byrd told reporters Carter perhaps should abandon the rebate, "a battle the President can do without and not one that is winnable....As of today it would not pass," he said.
Asked if it is fair to hold the rebate hostage for the water projects, Byrd replied, "It's a realistic thing. You have to be a realist when you're talking about votes."

Stamp plan proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Poor people would no longer have to shell out cash to get food stamps under the Carter administration reform proposal announced Tuesday by Agricultural Secretary Bob Bergland.
The program would make between 2.5 million and 3 million more persons eligible but would cut back benefits to about 7 million, those with incomes at the highest end of the poverty scale.
The plan, presented to the House Agricultural Committee, won general praise on Capitol Hill, but it also got a warning about its possible disproportionate effect in high cost-of-living areas and some outright opposition on grounds it would be the start of a "giant guaranteed annual wage."

Sadat requests U.S. aid

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Anwar Sadat put Egypt's bid for U.S. military aid directly to President Carter and congressional leaders Tuesday, but White House spokesmen said he won "no commitments or decisions."
White House officials also said Sadat endorsed U.S. opposition to "interference from non-African powers" in African disputes. American criticism in that area has been aimed at the Soviet Union and Cuba.

although the thrust of Sadat's commitment was left vague.
The Egyptian President made his pitch for a share of U.S. weapons sales both at the White House and on Capitol Hill in concluding two days of official talks with U.S. leaders.
Carter pronounced himself "very pleased" with the "personal friendship" he established with Sadat who leaves Washington Wednesday, and White House press secretary Jody Powell said the two-day visit confirmed the "excellent state of relations" between Egypt and the United States.
But, Powell said, Carter agreed only to take Sadat's request for U.S. jet fighters, antinuclear missiles and cargo planes under consideration and to consult on the matter with Congress.

Vance briefs Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Secretary of State Cyrus Vance Tuesday opened a two-day effort to persuade Congress that U.S.-Soviet arms talks have suffered only a temporary setback—and he seemed to be getting some timely help from the Kremlin.
Vance was briefing the Senate Foreign Relations Committee late Tuesday on the strategic arms negotiations that ended last week with Soviet rejection of both major U.S. proposals.

He returns to Capitol Hill Wednesday to testify on the same issue before the House International Relations Committee.
Vance and President Carter have said repeatedly they do not consider the Soviet rejection as a "breakdown" of arms control efforts. They predict the Soviets will negotiate constructively on a new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty when talks resume this May in Geneva.
In Moscow, Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev said much the same thing in a comment which, while critical of the U.S. position, was far milder than previous Soviet statements on the issue.
"It is our program aim to achieve the solution of one of the most important tasks of our times, the task of limiting and ending the arms race, especially the nuclear arms race," Brezhnev said during a dinner toast to visiting Cuban Premier Fidel Castro.

PLAIN TALK FROM ARMCO ON FINDING A JOB:

Environmentalism —will it muddy the job pool?
Some people think America will have to spend a trillion dollars by the mid-1980's on more pollution control. Could this hurt your chance of getting a job you want? We hope not—but it's a possibility.
America simply doesn't have a trillion dollars to spare. Shifting so vast an amount from other uses will disrupt nearly every other national goal.
Adding costly environmental equipment doesn't increase industrial production. So once the equipment is in place, the handful of new jobs created for pollution control is more than offset by production jobs that don't appear. Spending large sums on pollution control means companies can't spend that money on something else—like new jobs.
We're going to need another 18,000,000 jobs in this country by 1985. These days the average job costs $42,168 to create. So a trillion dollars is more than the total current cost of creating 18,000,000 jobs.
Even if we had a trillion dollars, America couldn't satisfy its most extreme environmental demands already on the books. Air quality rules now lock important areas of the country out of any new industrial development. And water quality standards being applied to all bodies of water, no matter how they're used, will stymie even population growth in many parts of the U.S.
We all want clean air and water. We've been sensitized to pollution's dangers for years. But the fact is: America's air and water have been getting cleaner lately. We've obviously still got a lot to do. But as we do it, we need to study carefully the costs and benefits, to keep environmentalism from tying America up in knots.

Plain talk about POLLUTION CONTROL
So far, Armco has spent $260,000,000 for pollution control systems. Running that equipment costs us another $26,000,000 a year. We've slashed our air emissions 95%. But now we've passed the point of diminishing returns. Cutting into that final 5% can cost more—and waste more electrical energy—than it took to stop the entire 95%. What's worse, generating the electricity to reduce industrial emissions further often creates more pollution at power plants than industry removes. As a nation, we need to carefully examine environmental demands and balance them against their social, as well as economic, consequences.
Next time somebody says industry ought to start cleaning up its act, you might like to point out that the clean-up is well on its way. The more extra environmental costs pile on, the fewer new jobs there may be.

Armco wants your plain talk on environmentalism and jobs
Does our message make sense? We'd like to know what you think. Your personal experiences. Facts you've found to prove or disprove our point. Drop us a line. We'll send you a more detailed report on the relationship between pollution control and jobs. Our offer of How to Get a Job, above, tells you how to write us. Let us hear from you. We've all got a stake in more American jobs.
