Crowds flock to APO Campus Carnival

"Hey Zaliagiris. Come on and get Al McGuire," yelled a drenched student at the water-balloon toss booth titled "Frustrated?"

The junior basketball player smiled, continued walking through the crowd and made a choking gesture with his hands. "Yeah, I'd like to get him like this," he replied.

He was one of the few persons at the Alpha Phi Omega (APO) Campus Carnival last week able to resist the temptation to barrage fellow UNC students with eggs, water, mashed potatoes or even grits at some of the 32 booths.

But the carnival also provided many other activities at Ehringhaus Field. Food booths served dishes from hot dogs to egg rolls. Gaming tables, ranging from the Zeta Beta Tau numbers game to the Beta Theta Pi "Beta Vegas," were set up.

The excitement was maintained by a steady flow of beer and music from the UNC Jazz Lab Band, Rick Bouley and the Oxbow Incident and the Apple Chill Cloggers.

Perhaps the most eye-catching event was the car-smashing booth of the Chi Phi fraternity. For 50 cents, participants could have one minute to attack a 1949 Pontiac with a sledgehammer.

At the Phi Gamma Delta "Egg Throw" the crowd had the opportunity to toss eggs at the fraternity brothers, protected only by a motorcycle helmet. "Our pledge trainer suggested we could do this, and we figured it would be a wild thing to do—and it is," Kevin Shwedo said after experiencing the ordeal.

Other frustrations were taken out at the Phi Sigma Kappa dunking booth, the Kappa Kappa Gamma "Grit a Kappa" exhibition and the Collegiate Civitan water-balloon throw.

Ann Philbrick at the "Pie a Pi Phi" booth explained that she was willing to face mashed potato pies for such a good cause as the APO Campus Chest. "It's been messy, but it's been a lot of fun," she said while watching sister Betsy Thurmond clean her face of the goo. "No it hasn't," protested the victim.

Negotiator sees chance for peace in Middle East

By DAVID WATTERS
Staff Writer

The creation of new economic and political ties in the Arab states has increased the chances for peace agreements in the Middle East, L. Dean Brown, U.S. negotiator in the 1976 Lebanese conflict, said in a recent speech at UNC.

Brown called for the United States to play a key role in the negotiations because it is the only country with access to all parties in the dispute.

"Iraq and Libya no longer set the tone of the Middle East," Brown said. "It is set by Saudi Arabia, Syria and Egypt, and these three countries can live side by side with Israel."

A stagnation of peace-making efforts would lead to another war in the Middle East, Brown said, and the next war would take more lives because civilian centers could be attacked with long-range missiles which both sides now have.

More than half of the United States' oil soon will be supplied from foreign wells, Brown said. "Our economy will depend on the Middle East," he said. "The political problems of the Middle East will have to be solved not only to stop another war, but also to stop our own economic downfall."

Any solution in the Middle East would have to include a homeland for Palestine, Brown said. "For the first time ever the PLO (Palestine Liberation Organization) is meeting with Israel about how to accommodate for Palestine."

Brown credited Carter with helping the peace negotiations. "Carter is the first major American political figure to call for a homeland for Palestine."

Brown said there are many sacred Islamic sites in Jerusalem, and the Palestinians must be able to go to their religious sites without having to go through Israeli checkpoints.

Brown's speech was part of the 1977 International Affairs Colloquium.
