Local theaters' reactions mixed to anti-porn bill

By MEREDITH CREWS
Staff Writer

A tough anti-pornography bill that went into effect Aug. 1 allowing adult theaters to be declared public nuisances and shut down has drawn mixed reactions from adult theater owners in the Triangle area.

While some theaters have altered their formats to cope with the new law, others continue to show obscene movies despite the possibility of strict enforcement.

According to the law, a business is considered a nuisance if a substantial part of the business consists of showing obscene matter. Some theaters that used to show a majority of X-rated films, such as Studio-One in Raleigh, have recently switched distributors and now show regular movies.

"We've lost some customers since we stopped showing X-rated films, but it's too early to tell whether we're going to get hurt by the transition," Studio One Manager Michael Washburn said.

The Chateau II Adult Theater in Raleigh continues to show X-rated films. According to the manager, the X-rated movie business is "not so hot" as a result of publicity over the crackdown.

"Business has been slack for the past few weeks because a Durham man was arrested for showing X-rated films," the manager said. "I expect business to pick up once the controversy dies down."

The Wak-Art theater in Zebulon is trying to compromise with the new law. The theater used to specialize in adult films, but now shows regular movies in the evenings and X-rated films in the afternoons.

"We still have a good audience for the X-rated films, but we're losing a little on the regular movies. I can't speculate about the overall effect this will have on business," said Leonard Fowler, Wak-Art manager.

Movie theaters in Chapel Hill have not been affected by the new law because their movie listings are not considered obscene.

The Midway Drive-In in Durham, the Country Drive-In in Smithfield and the 403 Drive-In in Clinton still advertise adult attractions.

According to the law, obscenity refers to films or publications in which sex acts are explicitly depicted. It also encompasses "lewd displays of the genital areas."

The county district attorney or the N.C. attorney general may initiate action to have the business declared a nuisance through civil-abatement procedures.

Ralph Strickland of the Durham County District Attorney's office said they are investigating the adult theaters.

ROASTED HEROES

151 E. Rosemary TAKE OUT! CALL 967-4696

The Carolina Union Activities Board, Eric Locher, pres.

If interested in serving on a committee, stop by the Union information desk.

CURRENT AFFAIRS — Nancy Mattax
The Current Affairs Committee reaffirms commitment to the education and well being of the student community, both by dealing with the current concerns of the immediate community and issues facing the state and country at large. The aim is to bring students together with decision makers and experts in participatory Group-Think. Topics may range from scientific responsibility and recombinant DNA to the recall of a student body president.

FORUM — Ed Nanney
Striving to present a balanced program, the committee selects and presents speakers which represent the wide-ranging interests of the university community. Classroom visits, informal receptions and other opportunities for personal contact with students are incorporated into the speaker's itinerary when possible.

GALLERY — Susanna Bowen
The Gallery Committee involves working with and meeting new, exciting people who are interested in expanding their knowledge of Art. A variety of exhibits ranging from crafts to sculpture will be selected and displayed by the committee.

PERFORMING ARTS — Carolyn Jack
The committee provides the UNC campus with entertainment and cultural events in the areas of dance, comedy and variety, music and drama. It seeks to enrich campus life not only with professional programs, but with opportunities for students to display their own talents and to create their own cultural atmosphere.

PUBLICITY — Richard Young
Utilizing The Tar Heel, other newspapers, monthly calendars, posters and fliers, radio and TV, and the infamous Cube, the committee's staff of artists and writers will keep the university community abreast of what is to come.

RECREATION — Helen Ruth Fleming
The Recreation Committee is in charge of coordinating and creating both competitive and spontaneous events. Areas of interest include: the College Bowl, bowling, billiards, bridge and chess. Whether through tournaments, exhibitions or instruction, the committee provides a year-round program of activities.

SOCIAL — Ana Mari McLanahan
Weekly entertainment in Deep Jonah, the Union coffeehouse, will be the major focus of the Social Committee whose program also includes dances in the Pit, disco nights and other informal parties and gatherings.

SOUTH CAMPUS — Nick Long
The South Campus Committee will attempt to coordinate programs between the dorms "south of the Bell Tower" and the various Union committees. It will serve as a catalyst to create a better living-learning environment for South Campus residents and for the entire campus as well.

SPECIAL PROJECTS — Dana Papke
As the name implies, Special Projects encompasses a myriad of focal points whether initiated by an individual student or student groups. In addition, the committee organizes such projects as the Free University Program enabling students to engage in the "classroom experience" as either student or teacher.

VIDEOTAPE — Clarence Burke
Using amateurs and students with video experiences, the committee will provide students with interesting and informative shows. They will select "canned" programs and provide promotional tapes for other union events.
