

Area opposition expected I-40 addition planned

From staff and wire reports

RALEIGH, N.C. — State and federal highway officials have agreed to construct a 20.4-mile section of Interstate 40 from Hillsborough to Research Triangle.

They plan to make that agreement formal Tuesday. Barring any successful opposition, contract bids for the project will be let in 1980.

But the planned route is expected to draw opposition from Orange County residents, who strongly opposed it during a public hearing on several proposed routes on June 29, 1976. Most of those who spoke against the corridor opposed having it come through Orange County at all.

Richard Whitted, chairperson of the Orange County Board of Commissioners, said county government has gone on record against the proposed route.

would be devastating.

The route agreed upon would begin just east of the Interstate 85 and State Road 1009 interchange at Hillsborough and run parallel to North Carolina Highway 86. It would then turn east from State Road 1733 to the Durham County line at U.S. Highway 15-501, continue southeast to Jordan Lake, then run east to the existing I-40 link which now ends at Research Triangle Park.

The route, which would curve between the cities of Durham and Chapel Hill, was supported by Durham officials and private officials. It runs closer to Chapel Hill than Durham.

The corridor would run through gently rolling areas, most of which are undeveloped, said Henry Clegg, assistant highway administrator. It would force the relocation of 94 families and 11 businesses, he said.

Other corridors which would have gone through urban sections of Durham drew heavy opposition from residents.

Adoption of the route would be a major step forward for a project which has been stalled for most of the decade.

If it is adopted by the board, a final environmental impact statement will be completed and circulated for comment by the various state and federal agencies involved. If no drawbacks develop, a design hearing could be held in late 1978.

Carrboro Board of Aldermen votes down improvements

The Carrboro Board of Aldermen voted against a proposed $1-million bond referendum for improvement of streets last week because they said they believe the streets can be paved without selling bonds.

A street in Carrboro is paved if a majority of the residents on the street petition for paving. The town pays 40 per cent of the cost of paving, and the residents pay 60 per cent.

Braxton Foushee said without the bond money, streets in black neighborhoods will not be paved. He said the black residents are aware of the petition process, but they cannot get enough signatures to have the streets paved.

"Cost is a very important factor," Foushee said. "They know how to get their streets paved. It's just that they are choosing not to have them paved."

After the aldermen voted against the referendum, they asked Town Attorney Michael Brough to draft some legislation that would allow them to assess residents of streets that need to be paved without waiting for a petition from the residents.

Condie appoints assistant, new residence directors

A new assistant director for residence life and four new residence directors (RDs) have been appointed by Director of Housing James D. Condie.

Appointed assistant director for residence life is Jim Osteen. His duties at UNC will include supervising the nine RDs and the entire residence-hall student staff. Osteen has coordinated residence-hall programs at the University of Arkansas, where he was assistant director of housing.

The new RD for Hinton James Dorm is Joy Harpater. 27. Harpater worked as resident coordinator and summer conference coordinator at UNC-Charlotte.

Steve McCormick, 23, is the new RD for Parker, Avery and Teague dorms. McCormick worked as a residence-hall graduate intern while completing his graduate studies at Purdue University.

Penny Rue, 24, is the new RD for Spencer, Whitehead, Alderman, Melver and Kenan dorms. She has worked as an assistant residence-hall director and academic adviser at Ohio State University.

The new RD for Henderson Residence College, consisting of Winston, Connor and Alexander dorms, is Ron Wilson, 23. He is a former national director of the National Association of College and University Residence Halls.

Wells drilled on campus to alleviate water crisis

By AMY McRARY
Staff Writer

Two wells drilled on the UNC campus are supplying back-up water for the swimming pools near Woolen Gym and chilled water for campus air conditioners. More wells are being drilled or fitted with pumps for alternate water sources for University buildings.

The first well was drilled Aug. 2 at the swimming-pool area to supply make-up water lost from the pools by evaporation and swimming.

Another well constructed at the Bell Tower parking lot is supplying chilled water for air conditioners in the Health Affairs complex. The wells are being drilled by the Heiter Well Co. from Cary.

"The well at the Bell Tower parking lot is making a significant contribution to the water source for the air-conditioner units in the Health Affairs complex," said Director of the Physical Plant, Gene Swecker. The well is producing 40 gallons per minute, or 50 to 60 per cent of the water necessary for the air conditioners.

Although the wells at the swimming pools and the parking lot are the only ones now being used by the University, others are being completed or being drilled to produce an additional water supply for UNC.

A well will be hooked up at Van Hecke-Wettach Hall within the next few days to supply chilled water for air conditioners there, Swecker said.

The University laundries on West Cameron Avenue will receive all their water from two wells being finished there. However, it will be at least three weeks before the wells are hooked up to the laundry system, Swecker said.

Two more wells have been drilled at the South Water Chiller Plant located behind Married Student Housing to produce water for air conditioners in the Health Affairs Complex, the Dental School and the Faculty Laboratories now being constructed. But these wells have not been connected because they are low-water producers. Water from one well is being used to water plants on the campus.

Pumps have been ordered for two wells being drilled at Kenan Lab and behind the Morehead Planetarium. These wells will furnish water for air conditioners in Kenan, Davie and the Planetarium. The well behind the planetarium may also serve to water plants, Swecker said.

An experimental well is being drilled near Navy Field, the football practice field. The well will be used to keep the football fields green, but the physical plant doesn't know yet if this well will produce, Swecker said.

According to Swecker, at least two more wells will be attempted after drilling is completed on the experimental one at Navy Field. One will be drilled at Phillips Hall because monthly water-meter readings by the Orange Water and Sewer Authority indicate that Phillips is one of the buildings using the largest amount of water, Swecker said. The other well will be drilled in the depression behind Lenoir Hall near the Carolina Union parking lot.

Tutorial service to expand

Students looking for tutors to help them through a particularly difficult course can consult the Student Government Tutorial Service, a service designed to aid students in finding tutors. This year, the service will be expanded to include courses in the College of Arts and Sciences and the School of Business.

Ann Marie Knops, director of the tutorial service, said the deans of the schools involved are enthusiastic about the expanded service. Knops is organizing a staff to contact tutors and groups that may be willing to supply tutors.

The tutorial service was started last spring by Alpha Epsilon Delta, the campus premed, premedical society, for use in the mathematics and sciences departments. This is the second semester the service has existed and the first to include all courses in arts and sciences and the business school.
