Car stolen, bloodied; New West vandalized

University Police said they have discovered bloodstains in a recovered automobile that was reported stolen Friday from a medical complex parking lot.

Police said Debra Lee West Godding, an employee of N.C. Memorial Hospital, reported she found traces of blood on the passenger seat of her car and a quarter tank of gas missing when she returned to it Friday afternoon. Earlier, Godding had discovered her pocketbook and car keys missing while she was at work.

The car was parked in the space where Godding left it, police said. According to the complaint, Godding believes the car was stolen because of the missing keys, the expended gasoline and the bloodstains.

No arrests have been made in connection with the alleged theft.

In another incident, vandals entered two rooms in New West Saturday and broke several window panes, according to police reports. Police said window air conditioners in two rooms were tampered with and officers believe the suspects were attempting to steal them. Total damage to the building was estimated at $75.

Coffee Klatch opens Tuesday

By KATHY HART
Staff Writer

Reminiscent of the old English coffeehouses, where the talk was informal and the atmosphere relaxed, is the University YM-YWCA-sponsored Coffee Klatch, held every Tuesday and Wednesday in the Pine Room from 9 to 11 a.m.

"It is a very informal atmosphere where students get to know another side of their professors," said Emily Cate, co-chairperson of Coffee Klatch. "You get to know things about professors and other students you can't learn in a classroom situation."

"The topics of conversation vary widely," said Manley Roberts, Coffee Klatch publicity chairperson. "You can go in and talk about whatever you want to talk about."

Professors are invited from every department of the University, but each week one department receives a special invitation to attend.

Coffee and pastries are served at each meeting for a minimal fee. A host and hostess, chosen each week from a different campus organization, handle introductions and make sure things run smoothly. Eventually, however, the host and hostess system will be eliminated.

Coffee Klatch began last spring, but Cate said it lacked the publicity it needed to become firmly established. "People are not used to the idea, and it is hard to get students accustomed to the thought of talking to professors in an informal atmosphere," she said.

"The idea for Coffee Klatch originated last summer at the Reidsville Conference, where student leaders and administrators meet to discuss campus problems," said Jerry McConnell, who helped coordinate the project last year.

"Everyone was concerned about the lack of communication between students and professors," he said. "Professors remembered the coffeehouses that were formerly held at the University and thought the idea should be reinstated."

Pillow, mattress burn in dorm fire

A pillow and a mattress were the only items damaged by a smoldering fire which was extinguished early Saturday morning in a Stacy Dormitory room after a passing jogger spotted smoke coming from a window.

Chip Delamater, the only occupant of the room at the time of the fire, said the blaze was started by a cigarette left burning in an ashtray. The cigarette ignited a study pillow and burned a small hole in the mattress where Delamater was sleeping.

Steve Holmes, a Stacy residence assistant, said he was awakened at 6:45 a.m. by a jogger, who told him smoke was coming from a second-floor window. Holmes and the jogger, identified only as Mike, went to the room, woke up Delamater and put out the fire with a fire extinguisher and several buckets of water.

According to housing department officials, all dormitory mattresses are flame-resistant.

Renwick new associate dean

Hayden B. Renwick, head of UNC's minority-advising program, was named associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences last week.

As an assistant dean in the College in Arts and Sciences, Renwick was instrumental in implementing a counseling network for minority students at UNC.

The program uses sophomores and juniors to work with freshmen and transfer students. Counselors advise new students in academics and offer help to new students having trouble adjusting to other areas of college life.

In his new job, Renwick hopes to expand the adviser program to minority students and to institute a similar program for disadvantaged white students. Renwick said Sunday.

"I feel the University is going in the direction of positive integration of the student body," Renwick said. "I hope by 1980 we will have a program that will benefit all students."

Renwick also was named as special assistant to the chancellor last month. Those duties include advising Chancellor N. Ferebee Taylor on ways to eliminate racial duality and to increase minority enrollment at the University.

Renwick is a graduate of Johnson C. Smith University and received a master's degree in education from UNC in 1965. He became assistant director of Undergraduate Admissions at UNC in 1969 and was appointed assistant dean of the College of Arts and Sciences in 1973.

He becomes the third associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Parking permits ready for close-outs, others

The 108 students who applied for campus parking permits but did not receive them can only stand in line beginning at 8 a.m. today and hope for permits.

Any person with a temporary permit who failed to pick up his permanent sticker by Sept. 7 had his application cancelled Friday.

"A student having a temporary permit did not guarantee that he would receive a permanent space to park," said Ted Marvin, director of the UNC Security Office.

The permits on sale Monday will be for cancelled spaces and spaces in parking lots that have not been sold out, Marvin said.

Spaces are still available in parking lot N-1 on Rosemary Street, lot P at the Airport parking lot, lot R at the UNC Physical Plant, lot W-1 near the Carolina Inn and S-3 between the law school and the Institute of Government.

The other alternative for students without parking spaces is to apply for one of the spaces allotted to the Student Government Association (SGA) by the traffic office.

SGA receives 10 percent of all parking spaces to give to handicapped students or to people who cannot get to campus except by car.

Only 5 percent of the SGA allotment was used this year, SGA Chairman of Transportation Craig Brown said.

"We can take care of the 108 students who did not receive a space," Brown said. "It just won't be where they wanted it."
