Three seats open; council elections to be held Oct. 15

Elections for three Campus Governing Council (CGC) seats will be held Oct. 15. Elections Board Chairperson Mike Harkin announced.

The vacant seats are those for districts 1, 17 and 20, Harkin said.

District 1 is a graduate- and professional-student district covering the Department of City and Regional Planning, the Department of Political Science and the law school.

District 17 is the area of Orange County northwest of the intersection of Franklin and Columbia streets. District 20 is to the southwest of that intersection.

Potential candidates must submit a petition containing 25 signatures to the Elections Board in Suite C of the Carolina Union by Wednesday. The petitions will be available from the board until then.

Fee-paying students in good standing with the University are eligible to run for the seats.

AWS lecture excerpts

The following are excerpts from workshop lectures and discussions at the Intercollegiate Association for Women Students Tri-state Meet, held at UNC this weekend.

Christie Barbee of North Carolinians United for ERA on passing the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA): "When it comes down to it, anti-ERA groups base their arguments on God, country, apple pie and motherhood. University and college campuses should avoid open debates because you can't argue against emotion on an intellectual level. Never give them a forum to voice their opinions."

"Pro-ERA groups should watch their physical appearances. Appearances matter to a lot of people, and we may have lost support when one of our speakers during the legislature debates looked like the stereotyped feminist. More people could identify with Phyllis Schlafly's all-American smile, designer dress and gold earrings."

Lindsey Hutt of the Orange-Durham County Coalition for Battered Women on battered women: "It's hard to explain why all of a sudden there is a concern for battered women. The people that women traditionally had gone to and said 'help me' were totally helpless — they didn't know how to counsel for this problem. So they're starting to seek out people who do know."

"It's sort of a chain reaction — people who abuse or are abused come from families where there is a history of violence. One group that set up a crisis line kinda got scared by the size of the problem they uncovered when they set up their service. The key issue in the whole thing is it's very very difficult to get figures — no one wants to talk about it."

Elizabeth Koontz, assistant superintendent of the N.C. State Department of Public Instruction and chairperson of the state International Women's Year Coordinating Commission, on ERA: "I don't think we can pass the ERA in this state until we can reach the woman who is on the defensive because she is not working."

Frances Hogan, director of women's athletics at UNC, on the equality of men's and women's athletics: "I would say that's been the story of women's athletics: Women have never been recognized. We've had good athletes. We've sort of plodded along."

Hearing on drop policy today

The Educational Policy Committee will hold an open hearing on the drop policy at 3 p.m. today in 310 Davie Hall.

The committee is studying changes in the present four-week drop policy. Student Government has recommended to the committee that the drop period be extended to eight weeks.

But Vaida Thompson, committee chairperson, says committee members want input from other students and student groups besides Student Government. "We feel other students may have different views, and we want feedback from them, too," she says.

The committee is interested in changes from the standpoint of educational philosophy, Thompson says. "The committee does consider its basic obligation to be to look at philosophy, not just policy," she says.

But Henry C. Boren, secretary of the faculty, says the hearings probably will not help the committee reach a decision. "They're going to get recommendations to extend the drop period to five, six or eight weeks and to make it 12 weeks again," he says.

"It really doesn't matter what a Gallup poll of the campus says — the decision should be based on what's right educationally," Boren says.

The committee plans to submit its report to the Faculty Council at the council's Oct. 21 meeting.

Print returned

"Baigneuse Debout," the 1906 Renoir etching which was stolen last week, was returned by mail to the Ackland Museum Friday.

Ackland officials said publicity by the Daily Tar Heel may have prompted the return of the $210 print.

The print was taken from a table at the museum, where it was being offered for sale by Robert Woodside of Baltimore, Md.

University police said the sale was held in a special showroom in Ackland and was not under the museum's regular security protection.
