Creek authority to continue opposition despite injunction

By STEVE HUETTEL
Staff Writer

The Cane Creek Conservation Authority (CCCA) will continue to oppose the plans for Cane Creek reservoir, although the N.C. Court of Appeals unanimously upheld an injunction prohibiting the area's residents from banning Orange Water and Sewer Authority (OWASA) surveyors from their property, according to CCCA attorney George Hunt.

OWASA wants to survey property in the Orange Grove community, a rural farming area in southwest Orange County, so that it can submit maps with information needed by the N.C. Environmental Management Commission. OWASA must obtain a permit from the commission before it can build the reservoir, which would supply University Lake with 10 million gallons of water per day via a pipeline.

The CCCA's first action may be to request the N.C. Supreme Court for a writ of certiorari, which would allow the injunction to be reviewed by the court. "They (the CCCA) will meet with me in the latter part of the week and tell me whether to go ahead," Hunt said. "It's got to be done immediately."

The CCCA's real battle will be when OWASA goes before the N.C. Environmental Management Commission, according to Hunt. He says that the law states OWASA must meet several criteria, including establishing that they are making the best use of water resources, before the plan is approved.

Dr. George Ham, former psychiatry chairperson, dies

Dr. George C. Ham, 64, the first chairperson of the UNC Department of Psychiatry, died Monday at his home following a lengthy illness.

A memorial service will be held at 3 p.m. Sunday at the Community Church on Purefoy Road.

Dr. Ham joined the faculty of the School of Medicine shortly before it became a four-year school. For the next 12 years, he worked to improve the psychiatry department and to integrate the medical school's facilities and services with those of the North Carolina Department of Mental Health.

Dr. Ham entered private practice in 1964 as a member of Psychiatric Associates of Chapel Hill. He continued his practice until his death.

"I feel the loss very keenly," said Dr. Thomas E. Curtis, chairperson of the Department of Psychiatry. "I have known Dr. Ham well over 20 years. He was quite respected by the students and teachers he worked with. He was a leader way ahead of his time."

I-40 opponents mount political pressure plan

By MARK ANDREWS
Staff Writer

Opponents of the state Department of Transportation's plan to construct a section of Interstate 40 through rural Orange and Durham counties made plans to mount political pressure against state and federal officials in a meeting Tuesday at Carrboro Town Hall.

Carrboro town officials and members of interested citizen groups met with coalition organizer B. B. Olive to discuss how to get citizens involved in stopping construction of the 20.5-mile corridor. Citizens will be urged to write letters to the editors of local newspapers as well as to politicians.

The chief target of the coalition's citizen pressure will be Governor Jim Hunt. Olive, a Durham patent attorney, cited past instances where the governor has used his influence to halt or postpone development projects that aroused considerable citizen protest.

The coalition threatened to try to organize resistance to the Hunt-supported bond issue for secondary roads and bridges. The bond issue will be voted on in November.

Olive said that if Hunt does not lend his support to the coalition in fighting I-40, "I think it's fair to assume a statewide campaign against the $300-million bond issue will be launched."

"You can't please everybody," Olive said Hunt told him at a recent social function at Duke University when Olive told the governor of local opposition to the I-40 route.

Olive said the coalition's preparations for court action to stop the route are looking "very good, very sound."

The Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen voted Tuesday night to allow the town to be entered as a plaintiff in the litigations.

Mark Payne, who represents UNC Student Government on the coalition, said Student Government will organize petitions and letter-writing campaigns to get UNC students involved in the battle.
