Suspicious person sighted in Odum; vandalism occurs at Beat State

University Police Monday narrowed the search for a suspect wanted in connection with a suspicious-person sighting in Odum Village Sunday night, a police spokesperson said.

Jeff Nagle told police he and his wife heard footsteps outside a window of their home at 214-A Branson St. late Sunday night. Police officers called to the scene searched but found no one in the area. The spokesperson said they have received similar reports from the area.

Vandalism at the Beat State Extravaganza in Woolen Gym Thursday resulted in more than $150 damage to a water fountain and a bathroom door, according to police reports. Lt. Leon Ivey said the Delta Upsilon fraternity, sponsor of the pep rally, will be held responsible for the damage.

Two men broke into the Morrison lobby early Thursday and threw three charcoal grills over the second-floor balcony, a dormitory desk attendant reported to police.

Police summoned to Morrison apprehended two suspects but later released them, saying the two intoxicated men admitted they had entered the building illegally and said they would pay for damages totaling $25. There were no arrests.

Diane Travis of 246 Craige told police her room was ransacked after she had left it at 2 a.m. last Sunday. When she returned at 4:40 a.m., she found her purse emptied on her bed, chest drawers ransacked and flower pots knocked to the floor.

Police reports indicate the suspects entered through the room window and exited via the door. Missing items included a clock radio, a portable TV and $2 in change. Total value of the missing items is $182.

James B. Snider of 734 Hinton James reported his $200 bicycle missing from the bike rack outside Dey Hall early Wednesday, police said. Snider told police he had locked his bike with a cable wrapped through both wheels and the rack.

Police said Garland Wayne Blackwell reported that he was assaulted with a water balloon while walking past Old East Friday afternoon.

Recent bus mishaps result in injuries

By KEITH HOLLAR
Staff Writer

Two recent mishaps resulting in injuries to bus passengers provoked warnings from Chapel Hill Transportation Department officials of the potential dangers awaiting the unwary passenger.

"We just want to make students more aware of the safety problem," Bert Gurganus, Chapel Hill Transit System's operations superintendent, said recently. "We're trying to make the drivers aware of the safety problem, and they're very conscious of it."

One accident occurred when a passenger got off a bus through a front exit and walked into the path of a motorcycle. In the other mishap, a student attempting to chase down a U-route bus was struck by a car. Gurganus said neither mishap resulted in serious injury.

But he said these accidents illustrated a point: "The potential is very great for serious injuries."

"Just because a bus is stopped doesn't mean the traffic flow has stopped," Gurganus said. Students hurrying to get to class are often guilty of exiting at the front and stepping into the street without checking for oncoming traffic, he said.

At a bus drivers' meeting last week, transportation officials requested that drivers ask passengers to exit at the rear door of the bus. But the policy of exiting at the rear is not new.

"That's the way we operate," said bus dispatcher Whit Thomas. "The rear exit is the safe exit, and you avoid oncoming passengers."

But, he said, some riders are stubborn and do not want to cooperate. "We can't fight with them. We can just warn them."

Thomas said the transportation department is preparing informational cards to help get the message across.

"We're going to put up cartoon-type signs in the buses warning riders what can happen when they get off the bus," he said.

"We'll use illustrations and words (on the cards) asking people to exit at the rear doors," said Bill Callahan, transportation administrative assistant. "We want something to stick in people's minds."

Gurganus said bicyclists and motorists who weave in and out of traffic also create dangerous situations.

"A lot of bicyclists do some pretty silly things, such as riding between a bus and the curb when the bus is about to make a stop," he said. "That can be fatal. It's difficult for drivers to see bicyclists with a 35-foot bus and two mirrors."

According to Bert Gurganus of the Chapel Hill Transportation Department, students aren't being as careful as they should be at bus stops. One of the biggest problems, Gurganus said, is persons pushing and shoving and jumping off the curb at bus stops before the bus stops, particularly a problem when large numbers of persons are waiting. Staff photo by Fred Barbour.

"There are some people who are very conscientious, but those who aren't make all the bicyclists look bad."

Gurganus cited several other situations brought to his attention by the bus drivers which created hazards involving buses:

- Persons getting between buses when more than one bus is unloading at the same stop. "If something happens to the brakes and the bus rolls, it can sandwich them between the buses."
- Persons standing at the edge of the curb on Columbia Street near the Scuttiebutt. Because the edge of the street dips toward the curb, the buses lean to the right, and anyone standing too closely may be struck by the right-hand mirror.
- Persons "pushing and shoving and jumping off the curb" at bus stops before the bus stops. This is particularly a problem when large numbers of persons are waiting to board a bus, and fearing they may be left.

TWO IMPORTANT EVENTS MARK YOUR CALENDAR

Attention Audlophiles!

Malcom Scholl, the designer of the new Audioanalyst PhaseMatrix speaker line and Dr. Tominari, the designer of the Dynavector cartridge and the world's only $595 tone arm will be here on Wednesday, October 19, from Noon—6 PM to meet the public and answer your questions!

The new Phase Matrix speakers add a third dimension to stereo imaging. Optimum dispersion coupled with the unique Phase Matrix eliminates phase cancellation. The result is stereo imaging unsurpassed by speakers costing far more.

The Dynavector cartridge takes the basic moving coil principle and develops it into new standards of perfection and performance. Each individual part has been designed and crafted to achieve previously unheard-of tolerances. This precision gives Dynavector its amazing output and crosstalk specifications.

Meet the men behind both of these outstanding components on Wednesday, October 19.

Audio Auction

Sunday, October 23

That's right—an Audio Auction! Stereo Sound will be auctioning off any components which you wish to offer for sale, as well as many new, used, discontinued and demo components from their stock. If you're interested, come by for further details. Check next week's Advocate for the time and place.

175 E. Franklin Street 942-8546
