

Foster parents needed in Orange County

The Orange County Department of Social Services is seeking foster parents to accommodate a growing number of children who need an alternative to their present home situation.

"We're beginning to have more children than we have foster homes available," Marilyn Tyroler, supervisor of Children's Services in the department, said Monday. She emphasized a need for black foster parents.

Tyroler said the department is appealing to graduate students and professors who can offer children "a physically safe place to live and a lot of love." She said several UNC graduate students and professors already are foster parents.

Foster parents receive for room and board and for the child's medical care, and the children may receive clothing and some allowance. But foster parents are not paid for keeping children, Tyroler said.

A foster parent need not be married nor own a home, Tyroler said, but he must be between the ages of 21 and 60.

The Department of Social Services selects the foster parents. "Most people weed themselves out without our having to do it," she said. For more information, prospective foster parents can call Tyroler in Chapel Hill at 967-8195 or Sarah West in Hillsborough at 732-2141 or 942-7200. A meeting to explain the program for prospective foster parents will be held at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 14 in the conference rooms of the Departments of Social Services in both Chapel Hill and Hillsborough.

The department also is asking for filibuster

But another result of the filibuster is that it monopolizes the floor causing several important issues to be postponed. These include:

- The new WXYC budget. As long as the filibuster continues, the veto is still in effect, and WXYC will receive none of its appropriation.

- Appointments to the student Supreme Court. The court is not operating at full strength. The CGC originally was scheduled to vote on approving Bill Moss' appointment to the court, but the filibuster prevented it. Although the court currently has enough members to have a quorum, it will not operate with the five members provided for in the student constitution until the filibuster ends and a new justice can be confirmed.

- Student fee increase. The CGC also was scheduled to vote on a bill that donations of jeans, shirts, socks and underwear for a family whose home burned this weekend. One girl needs clothing, size 8 to 10, and another needs jeans with a 30-inch waist and 27-inch length. The mother wears size 12 to 13 clothing. Donations can be made by contacting the Department of Social Services, which will arrange to pick up the clothing.

Publick Knowledge

Met a Zany lately?

Anyone who knows of zany happenings, unique people or other Publick Knowledge-type material may submit ideas to the Publick Knowledge box outside the Daily Tar Heel office in the Carolina Union.

A new-style water closet . . . Does your bathroom have a telephone in it? The brothers of Delta Upsilon fraternity have one in theirs.

Five inconspicuous men walked into the Union on Tuesday and began moving a telephone booth used in the DU-sponsored Beat State stuffing contest last week. No one stopped them, no one except DTH reporters asked them any questions. They took the booth out the doors near the Union parking lot and loaded it into their blue VW bus.

"It was lunch," a DU spokesperson said. "Musta been something in the barbecue."

"It's midterm relief."

They pushed and shoved the booth into the van, but it still hung three feet out the side.

"We wanted to put something over our toilet," the spokesperson said as he and his brothers zoomed out of the parking lot. Balancing act . . . Kim Egerton performs a balancing act almost every week at craft fairs all over North Carolina.

She's not an acrobat, but a salesperson for solo boards made by her partner, Mark Thompson.

A solo board is similar to a plank which rests on a tin can upon which one can balance. The "tin can," or roller, is made of wood and grooved. The board is about nine inches wide and three feet long, with a wooden track on the bottom, which fits the groove.

The groove and track allow you to do tricks on the board, like 360-degree turns, Egerton said.

Egerton said she sold about 30 boards in September at $20 each. Increased costs will probably raise the price to $24.95 by Christmas, she said.

If you groove on balancing acts, a solo board might be for you.

Sent to congress . . . L. Anne Nunnally is going to congress this January but she didn't win an election.

Nunnally has been appointed to the American Medical Association (AMA) Council on Medical Education. She will speak at the council's congress in Chicago.

Nunnally, a third-year medical student, also will attend AMA meetings in December and June.

She says her role at these meetings is to present the student viewpoint.

Athletic facility completion is delayed

By BRUCE ELLIS
Staff Writer

Despite a crushing need for additional campus recreational facilities, construction of a $400,000 athletic facility on Fetter Field has been delayed.

Completion of the facility, which will replace the now defunct Tin Can, has been set back from September to January or February.

"The steel structure for the building was not fabricated as specified, so we shipped it back to the manufacturer and it is being redone," said Selwyn N. Bryant, UNC director of engineering and construction in the Division of Operations and Engineering.

The building should be completed by January or February depending on the weather, Bryant said.

The delay in construction of the facility is further cramping the already-crowded conditions which exist in Woollen Gym, said Carl Blyth, physical education department chairperson.

"Right now, the situation (in Woollen Gym) is awful," Blyth said. "We don't have enough lockers, the lacrosse team is dressing in corners, students are dressing in halls and instructors don't have enough places to teach."

The men's and women's fencing teams, which practiced in the Tin Can last year, now practice in the Great Hall of the Carolina Union.

The 30,000-square-foot facility will have a small structure under designated for bathrooms, according to Gordon Rutherford, UNC director of facilities. Rutherford said the athletic facility will be single-spanned instead of having support posts running through its center as the Tin Can did. It will contain a track and an open playing area with a sand-asphalt floor.

Blyth said he is unsure what specific equipment will be installed in the building. He does not know, for example, whether it will contain basketball courts criss-crossing the playing floor as did the Tin Can.

"We're just trying to get the thing together right now," he said. "We'll worry about other details later." The details for later consideration include a formal name for the building.

"It will be a multi-purpose facility used for various activities by physical education classes, athletic teams and others," Blyth said. If weather conditions prevent an athletic team from practicing outside it, it can use the new facility, he said.

The Tin Can was torn down in June to provide space for the physical education and intramural building under construction beside Woollen Gym.

It housed a small playing floor for various activities and a one-tenth of a mile wooden track. The Tin Can was a popular free-play facility when not occupied by physical education classes, University athletic teams or intramural squads.

The new physical education and intramural building and the new Fetter Field facility, which are both under construction, should alleviate the current problems in Woollen Gym when they are completed.

In a magnificent full-color collection of paintings, book-jacket and record-sleeve illustrations, and etchings, one of the world's most popular fantasy/science fiction artists offers notes and commentary on each of his works. In Mythopoeikon, Patrick Woodroffe details the development of his fascination with fantastic art forms and subject obsessions, and his interest in "fantastic realism," as he studied artists such as Bosch and Dali. Mythopoeikon is a brilliant visual experience that will dazzle the eye and mind of anyone who sees it.
