Chapel Hill Alderman

I believe that students should actively participate in town government. I believe that I will encourage student involvement by circulating memos to campus organizations informing them of all vacancies on town boards and commissions.

Leighton Ford

Leighton Ford, associate evangelist with the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association, will speak during the 10:30 a.m. Sunday service of the Chapel Hill Bible Church in Memorial Hall.

He also has addressed leadership groups in education, politics and business and broadcasts the radio show, Hour of Decision.

Ford holds a B.A. degree with highest honors from Wheaton College and a Master of Divinity degree with high honors from Columbia Theological Seminary.

She said the results were invalid because of the lack of a printed ballot and the failure to check IDs.

"I would have felt better about a voice vote in Kenan Stadium than a vote on torn-up slips of paper," Woodruff said.

Woodruff said some students refused to vote because they thought the election was poorly organized.

Woodruff took her complaints to Associate Vice Chancellor William R. Strickland in the Office of Student Affairs. Strickland talked to Royle and examined the ballots.

"I am sufficiently satisfied that the outcome is a fair representation of a fair vote," Strickland said.

Approximately 1,700 students voted in the election, the largest turnout in recent years, according to Royle.

The names of six Homecoming Queen candidates were accidentally omitted from a cutline in the Daily Tar Heel Wednesday.

The omitted names of the candidates and their sponsors are Marian McElrath (Kenan Dorm), Cindy Norris (Spencer Dorm), Liz Elkins (Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity), Mary Alice Beam (Scott Residence College), Cindy Drake (Alpha Delta Pi sorority) and Mev Nall (Department of Security Services).

JIM MERKEL BELIEVES THE UNIVERSITY STUDENTS ARE A VITAL PART OF CHAPEL HILL AND HIS STANDS ON THE ISSUES PROVE IT:

STUDENTS AND TAXES: The biggest myth around is that most students don't pay taxes in Chapel Hill. The truth is that the majority of students live off campus. They pay taxes in their rent and in everything they buy. They also pay for water, for sewers, and for bus transportation. We're beginning to price some students right out of an education in Chapel Hill.

BUSES: The bus system is here and we need it. And I am greatly encouraged by reports of increased ridership. But we spend more money on buses in Chapel Hill than any other single item. We could save a lot by increasing efficiency, and running buses only where there is a demand for them.

TOWING: I certainly can think of better ways to greet new students and parents than towing their cars away.

ANTI-NOISE ORDINANCE: I'm opposed to the new Anti-Noise Ordinance and the use of electronic surveillance equipment. I like to celebrate a Carolina victory myself.

TOWN AND GOWN COOPERATION: I feel there should be a constant dialogue between elected student leaders and town officials. It can help solve mutual problems before they become crises.
