

Blue-White: basketball again comes bouncing into Chapel Hill

It's easy to tell when basketball season comes to Chapel Hill.

A horde of little autograph mongers gathered outside the Carolina locker room after the annual Blue-White basketball game Saturday to see if they couldn't try to get one or two of the player's signatures.

Inside the locker room, Dean Smith talked to reporters and every time the door opened, the kids got a glimpse of the man some of them respect as much as their fathers. Smith, as he talked with the reporters, finished a cigarette, opened the door and tossed the butt out. The scuffling as the kids fought for the butt could be heard in the locker room.

Carolina basketball is getting nearer again, but then, it really never left.

The Blue-White game never is really a prelude of things to come but rather a chance for alumni and students who can't get a ticket to the games to see the players in action.

Soccer trips Duke by 2-0

By TOD HUGHES

Duke came up empty-handed in trying to stall the Tar Heel soccer team's drive to a possible post-season playoff berth, dropping a 2-0 decision to UNC Saturday on slick Fetzer Field.

Both teams had some early scoring opportunities, but were denied by the play of the opponent's goalkeeper. Ten minutes into the first half, UNC's Martin Trimble was forced to leap high into the air to deflect a Blue Devil shot. Trimble recorded his eighth shutout of the year while working the net for Carolina. The Tar Heel defense was tested by the speed of Duke forwards Richard Murray from Jamaica and Ghanian Edwin Agyapong.

The game was extremely physical as several players were injured along the way. UNC scored halfway through the first period on a goal by Sean Naber, assisted by David Blum. Duke nearly knotted the score two minutes later but missed a penalty kick. One Duke player was warned for high rough play with a yellow card, but his persistence gained him an early exit from the game via a red card with six minutes left in the half. Duke was, therefore, forced to play a man short for the remainder of the contest.

Despite field conditions that were good for slide tackles but little else, Carolina managed to set up offensively quite well in the second half. With 21 minutes left, Dick Drayton outstripped a Blue Devil defender down the center of the field, dribbled left, and drilled the ball into the upper right-hand portion of the goal. Given a little breathing room, the Heels squelched the last efforts by Duke.

"Drayton put the icing on the cake," coach Anson Dorrance said. "Duke was a big factor. It was a great win for us. Duke played real well; when they got a man ejected, they played tough."

The Heels (12-3-1) play again today, hosting Guilford at 3 p.m. on Fetzer Field. UNC needs another victory and can't forget the 2-0 loss Guilford pinned on it in the preseason.

Fans love to watch the newly-signed freshmen players at intrasquad games to catch a glimpse of the greatness that has been promised. In one of the few intrasquad games in the nation that completely sells out, Carolina's three freshmen — Al Wood, Pete Budko and Mike Pepper — did what freshmen are expected to do. Wood had the most impressive performance of the freshmen and scored 11 points.

In addition to the freshmen, a new face also was making a debut in Carmichael. Derek McAllister, a junior academically and a sophomore in basketball eligibility, is trying to break into the Carolina lineup as a walk-on. He tried out for the junior varsity team, but coaches thought he had too much talent and have allowed him to practice with the varsity.

"He has a good chance of making the team," Smith said Saturday. A decision will be made early this week about whether McAllister will play for the varsity.

Geoff Crompton, the 6-11 319-pound behemoth who has been on and off the Carolina squad for five years, made his presence known Saturday bumping around lighter men on the floor but tiring easily.

But the old faithfuls gave the best show of the day. Senior Phil Ford, regarded by many as the best guard in the nation, didn't score the most points for the Blue team, as usual, but made his presence known by adding a spark to the lineup.

Dudley Bradley, Randy Wiel, Jeff Wolf, Tom Zaliagiris, Mike O'Koren, John Virgil, Rich Yonakor, Dave Colecott and Ged Doughton each had a good game, which the Blues won 80-79, ironically after the Whites had gone to the "four corners" late in the game.

The 1977-78 season opens under perhaps some of the most intense pressure faced by a Carolina team in recent years. Carolina is ranked No. 1 in the nation this season by several sport magazines and in the top 10 in many others. Wire service preseason rankings have not been released yet. But as Smith reflected on the performance of his players in the annual ritual Saturday, he said all the high preseason rankings are nothing but a reflection on the team last year, which finished second in the NCAA tournament.

"It's a nice compliment to the program and to last year's team," he said. "But that's where it ends."
Another Blue-White scrimmage is set for Nov. 13.

King, Hofstetter bright spots in Carolina harriers' choke

By SKIP FOREMAN

With the notable exceptions of Ralph King and Gary Hofstetter, the Carolina cross country team choked in its attempt to take the ACC Championships at Finley Golf Course Saturday.

The word choked may seem harsh, but there isn't a more subtle way to describe it. Having raced through the conference with relative ease this past season, the Tar Heels were a shoo-in to take the championship. Most of the other coaches in the conference said Carolina was the team to beat. Only coach Bill Lam, who had spent a great deal of time preparing the team, said that his stiffest challenge would come from Clemson. From that standpoint, Lam was correct. The Tigers finished fourth, the Heels fifth.

The only joy which could be salvaged from the attempt was the steady one-two combination of King and Hofstetter. King, a senior from Atlanta, was the only runner on the course to finish in less than thirty minutes. His time was 29:52.4. Hofstetter was clocked in 30:04. Virginia's Chris Fox, who led until the four-mile mark, finished third with 30:22.

But it was the performance of the normally reliable runners that took some of the glitter away from the King and Hofstetter show. Runners like Doug Slack, Mark Thompson and Ron Boatwright, normally fast finishers, were pushed far back in the pack and shot Carolina's score to a whopping 102, high by their, or any, cross country standards. Adding to their woes was an injury to Jimmy Cooper, also another good runner.

The championship honor went to Duke, a team that experienced a rebirth just prior to the contest. The Blue Devils had suffered the loss of Robbie Perkins earlier in the year and were getting mediocre performances from their remaining team members. Saturday, the Blue Devils put all the ingredients together. Though Bynum Merritt was fourth

Women's basketball

The Whites, led by last season's starting center Bernadette McGlade's 20 points, defeated the Blues 75-66 in a spirited second-half comeback in Carolina's annual intrasquad women's basketball game Saturday night in Carmichael Auditorium, involving both varsity and junior varsity players.

Helping McGlade on the White charge were Joyce Patterson, who had 11 points in the game, and Jackie Allison, with 10. Micki McGlade, Bernadette's sister, led the Blues with 10 points.
