

England trip applications still available

Students interested in spending 27 days in England and earning six credit hours may still apply to the "UNC Goes to London" program.

The program, which is being offered for the fourth consecutive year, is sponsored by the UNC Office of Off-Campus Credit and is open to any UNC student. Base price of the program is $1,108.23.

The program begins May 13 and includes 27 days of organized travel and instruction with the option of an additional 18 days of independent travel for each student.

Courses taught will be English 46, "Studies in Drama," with Christopher Armitage and Education 41, "The School in Society," with Gerald Unks. Armitage will focus on plays running in London at the time of the trip. The cost of several plays is included in the base price. Unks arranges visits to English schools as part of his course, which compares American and English educational systems.

Group trips to the English countryside are another aspect of the program. In the past, students have toured Oxford, Stonehenge, Salisbury, Coventry, Blenheim Palace and Stratford-on-Avon.

A total of 50 students will be accepted for the program. Interested students should contact Unks or Armitage for more details and applications.

William Windom, winner of an Emmy Award for his television portrayal of James Thurber, takes his characterization to the stage Saturday at N.C. State. Tickets are available for the 3 p.m. matinee and can be reserved by calling 737-3105.

Emmy-winning Windom portrays Thurber at State

Actor Hal Holbrook portrayed author Mark Twain on stage and screen. James Whitmore has been Will Rogers.

Joining these portrayals of America's great humorists is William Windom, who will recreate the enchanted world of James Thurber.

Windom will perform his celebrated impressions of Thurber on December 10 at Stewart Theatre on the N.C. State campus.

Two performances of the actors' world of cartoon characters will be presented.

Windom's interest in Thurber began when he saw Thurber's cartoons in The New Yorker and read The Secret Life of Walter Mitty and Things That Go Bump in the Night. This admiration for James Thurber was fed by his starring role in the TV series, My World and Welcome to It, based on the writings of Thurber. His portrayal of the author won him the Emmy Award in 1970.

Beyond Windom's two television shows, My World and Welcome to It and The Farmer's Daughter, he has been featured in such network series as Marcus Welby, M.D., All in the Family and Night Gallery. His many films include his portrayal of the D.A. opposite Gregory Peck in To Kill a Mockingbird, and the President of the United States in Escape from the Planet of the Apes. He is also a veteran of 20 Broadway plays.

Although the 8 p.m. performance Saturday has already sold out, a number of tickets remain for the 3 p.m. matinee. Call the Stewart Theatre box office at 737-3105 for reservations.
