Six recently hired MBA's tell why you should spend 30 minutes with a Bank of America recruiter.

They give it to you straight.
 "No vague promises, no snow jobs. You'll know exactly what positions are open, what's expected of you, what the bank will do for you—and what they won't. It's 30 minutes of give and take. And while you're learning about us, the recruiter is sizing you up. If he decides you're for us, one trip to one of our Bank of America units will produce a final decision in most cases. When the interview is over, you'll have a very good idea what you'll be doing over the next few months—and in the years to come!"

The Bank offers a variety of career opportunities.
 "In California, you'll start as a loan officer and head towards managing a community branch. You could be running your own profit center, and dealing directly with principals of business. Or you could enter the administrative area as a controller, or cashier. There are opportunities, as well, in our Leasing Department and other specialized areas. As a global banker, your first assignment in most cases will be in your home country; but after a time, you'll be involved in multinational transactions throughout the world."

They don't fill every nook and cranny with MBA's.
 "Bank of America management knows that MBA's are valuable. That's why they choose us with care—profit comes out of international business. And domestically, we have a solid base of over one thousand branches throughout California."

Some of the best people in banking work here.
 "When I see the quality of the people who work at Bank of America, it makes me proud to be a member of the team. The professionalism and competence here are simply outstanding. They're looking for people who can meet these high standards. If you want to work with some of the best people in banking, you owe it to yourself to talk to us."

Bank of America is actively seeking top-quality MBA's to fill a number of specific openings in California and around the world. To arrange for your interview, contact us.
