Heneghan, Mitchell to square off Wednesday in fight for Carolina Athletic Association post

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Staff Writer

Dan Heneghan and Pete Mitchell will face each other in a runoff election for Carolina Athletic Association president Wednesday. While some of their platforms are alike, they differ on issues such as basketball-ticket distribution.

Dan Heneghan

Heneghan said he would initiate a CAA achievement medal to go to an outstanding female athlete and scholar. The money for this award would come from the Homecoming entry fees and would be a way of returning the money to the students, he said.

Heneghan suggested earlier in the campaign that voting for Homecoming queen be recorded by having students' athletic passes punched when they vote. He said he talked to Athletic Director Bill Cobey Monday and Cobey said this method would be used next year.

But Heneghan said that Homecoming is not his only concern and that one of the main duties of the CAA president is to advise the Athletic Council of student opinions. "It is necessary to make CAA president a more innovative voice on campus," he said.

He favors game-day distribution of football tickets and would experiment with different types of basketball-ticket distribution on the less important games.

Heneghan, a junior history major from Washington, D.C., is a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity, a resident adviser in Manly and a UNC Football Club officer. He also participates in club sports.

Pete Mitchell

Mitchell said one of his major goals as CAA president would be to step up the recruiting of women athletes. He said he has been focusing on basketball because of its popularity and because a nationally ranked team would attract women here for other sports.

Mitchell also said he is willing to experiment with the distribution of football tickets. "The administration wants to get rid of extra tickets," he said. "I would be willing to try selling football tickets a week in advance as long as they (Athletic Council) would promise to reserve 500 to 1,000 tickets to sell the day of the game."

Mitchell said he favors the present distribution method for basketball tickets.

"People don't have a firm understanding of the Homecoming activities," Mitchell said. He supports more promotion of Homecoming by having a clear-cut schedule of events. He said Homecoming should either be promoted or abolished altogether.

Mitchell said CAA presidents have been powerless in the past because they have not known people in the administration and the media, not because of a lack of good ideas.

Mitchell, a junior journalism major from Lexington, is a member of Chi Psi fraternity and has worked as a Daily Tar Heel sports staff writer and columnist for three years. He said he has been in contact with many Woollen Gym officials through his journalism work and that this contact would help him as CAA president.

CGC districts also contested Wednesday

Several seats on the Campus Governing Council will be decided in runoff elections Wednesday.

Seeking CGC seats are the following:

- District 4: Preston Fogle, Weldon Jordan and Dru Scott.

- District 5: Del Kinlaw and Charlie Jafee.

- District 15: Christ Chapel and Steve Jacobson.

- District 17: Greg Underwood and Trelawny Williams.

- District 18: Charles Carpenter and Lyndon Fuller.

- District 19: Mark Collins, Doug Davis and Brad Lamb.
