"However, we have black leaders telling us that if we cut off financial support, it will be the blacks who lose their jobs first."

"Although the Carter administration does not endorse apartheid, South Africa does have favored trade status. Our policy is that we will continue to make loans for legal purposes in any country with which the United States has open relations," he added.

The War Resisters' League claims civilian aircraft bought by South African citizens may be used as military aircraft.

Jamison said NCNB does not make loans for military hardware.

"Even a Volkswagen Beetle could become a military weapon if you put a drill sergeant behind the wheel and use it for military transport," he said.
