SCAU looking for student participation in projects

By MELANIE SILL
Staff Writer

The officers of UNC's Student Consumer Action Union are calling for help.

"We're looking for writers, surveyors, speech people — anyone who's interested," said Debbie Gray, who handles SCAU's contact and education programs, complaint lines and new projects.

Each year, SCAU publishes pamphlets designed to aid local consumers. "The Southern Part of Heaven," updated last spring, looks into apartments in Chapel Hill and Carrboro. Other publications include "The Franklin Street Gourmet," a guide to local dining; "Wheeling and Dealing," a bicyclist's guide; "Consumer Health Handbook," "Automotive Repair Guide," "Cash," a guide to local banking; and a merchants guide.

Along with updating and adding to these publications, Gray said, SCAU has become more active in taking up causes for students.

"Our breadth of involvement depends upon student interest," Dan Coleman, SCAU vice chairperson said. "We're a student-funded organization, and we need the students to decide how to spend their money. Our product is tangible. These pamphlets are not only something students can use, see and read, but also something they can contribute to."

Projects planned for this year include a "Stereo and Camera Guide," a comparison of prices among local stores, an updated Servomation study and a wallet-sized card with "How to complain" on one side and "What to do when you're stopped by a policeman" on the other.

"We need workers," Coleman said. "We need people to go from store to store with lists and compare prices, meal planners to help with the Servomation study — just people willing to give effort and time."

SCAU's 1978-79 organizational meeting will be held at 4 p.m. today in Room 207 Carolina Union.

ADA lacks staff members

Apartment dwellers. That large group of expatriated students who live off-campus.

Like all students, apartment dwellers encounter occasional problems. But unlike dorm residents, apartment dwellers don't have hall- or suite-mates and RAs to help with their problems. They don't even have anyone to arrange social activities for them.

Until now, Apartment dwellers now have the named Association of Apartment Dwellers. An organization which began about a year ago under the auspices of Student Government, AAD has become independent and is formulating plans to make life a little easier for apartment residents.

But AAD is having problems of its own, especially in the area of staff. AAD has two members — its co-coordinators, Lyndon Fuller and Cary Ulman — and two aren't enough to carry out its projects.

"We don't have any staff to speak of," Ulman says. "Right now our main interest is in getting people to work for the association."

Students interested in participating in AAD may leave a message for Ulman or Fuller at the Student Government office in Suite C Carolina Union.

Once the staff is recruited, Ulman says he plans to have plenty for them to do. Projects include a special phone directory for persons in apartments; ride and carpool coordination; pamphlets on legal situations related to apartment living and efforts to support the beleaguered C-bus route.

"This is a program for folks who aren't in frats or sororities or dorms," Ulman said. "Those people need someone to look out for their interests, and that's what we'll try to do."

Application forms now available for Toronto exchange hopefuls

Applicants for the 1978-79 Toronto Exchange program may pick up applications and sign up for interviews at the Carolina Union information desk beginning Wednesday, committee spokesperson Eric Vernon announced Monday.

Interested persons are urged to submit their applications before the Sept. 8 deadline. Interviews will be held the week of Sept. 7.

All students registered at UNC are eligible to apply.

The Toronto Exchange was organized 18 years ago by UNC President William Friday and Clause Bissel, president of the University of Toronto. Each November, a delegation of Canadian students travels to Chapel Hill for a week of cultural interaction with their Carolina counterparts.

The UNC students visit Toronto in January.

Questions may be referred to Cindy Blanke at 929-5829 or Chip Ensslin at 929-0009.

WANNNA PASS THIS SEMESTER?

HERE'S ONE GUARANTEED PASS FOR YOUR FIRST TERM.

YOUR BUS PASS.

For freshmen and new students especially, going without personal wheels means the bus is more than a welcome convenience. It's a necessity. And for the thousands of folks who live at South Campus and other faraway places, nothing beats the bus for hauling home a small library of books, transporting several bags of canned goods from some store, or simply going out for a night on the town.

Beat yourself to class.

When you're late for class and still far away, those hills and valleys between you and class can get awful steep. Unless you take a bus. On the campus bus route, you're never more than five minutes from any stop on the line. When it comes to beating those hills, the bus really makes the grade.

Get around.

Going without a car doesn't mean you can't get around. With a bus you can travel just about anywhere in the village, take along as many friends as you want and not worry about driving home with one too many under your belt. And if you want to go on Sundays and nights, there's Shared-Ride Taxi, a service to bus pass holders that combines taxi convenience with bus rates for the best of both worlds.

We've never lost a bus.

Our drivers know exactly where they're going, even if you don't. And they don't mind answering your questions, when there's someplace you want to go. If you really want to learn the village, there's no easier way than cruising it by bus.

Pass the change.

When you trade your bag of nickels for a bus pass, you can ride unencumbered for a whole year. No fumbling for exact change; no cards to punch. Just flash your pass and you're home free.

$32 goes a long way.

Compared to $84 for a parking permit, a bus pass is a classic case of more for less. And you don't spend your day and your temper hunting for a parking place or fighting rush hour traffic. If you plan to stay around here for four years, the bus will help get you off to a good start. So give us a call when you get to town. We're at 942-5174. Remember, semesters come and go, but the bus will never fail you.
