

'68 UNC graduate dies after hang-gliding mishap

James Richard Spencer, a 1968 UNC graduate and University employee for eight years, died after a hang-gliding accident at Kitty Hawk Tuesday afternoon.

Spencer, 33, a Durham native, was the first hang-gliding death in the state, according to John Harris, president of Kitty Hawk Kites, for whom Spencer worked.

Spencer was on his third flight of the day when his glider stalled in gusty winds. He flew into the ridge, Harris said.

Spencer died at Norfolk General Hospital where he was taken after the accident.

He had been hang gliding for about three years and had worked at Kitty Hawk since August.

At UNC, Spencer was a member of Carolina Playmakers.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete. Survivors include his mother, Mrs. Baxter G. Proctor of Durham; his stepfather, Sidney W. Hilliard of Durham and a brother, Conley Hilliard of Durham.

L route bus to change schedule

On Monday, Oct. 2, Chapel Hill buses will begin operating a revised L route schedule, as a result of changes in service provided by the Carrboro service. While hours of operation and time between buses will remain the same, most schedule times will change somewhat.

New bus schedules are available on buses and at retail stores in Chapel Hill and Carrboro.

News in Brief

Helms plans to filibuster LEAA nominee

WASHINGTON—Republican Sen. Jesse Helms said in a telegram to President Carter Wednesday he may filibuster against the nomination of a law school dean as head of a federal law enforcement agency.

The Senate Judiciary Committee is holding a hearing today to determine if Norval Morris' nomination to head the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration will be sent to the Senate floor, where Helms has promised an "extended debate" against it.

Helms said in the telegram that ideas expressed by Morris, dean of the University of Chicago School of Law, "fly in the face of centuries of Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence and standards of moral conduct that furnish the underpinning of our freedom."

In a 1970 book, Morris advocated decriminalization of public drunkenness, narcotics use and sexual behavior between consenting adults.

White House press aide Jim Purks Thursday said the Carter administration stands behind Morris. "We've reviewed his book and everything written by Morris and considered him highly qualified," Purks said.

Attorneys agree on extension order

WARRENTON (AP)—Attorneys for the state and the town of Warrenton agreed Thursday to a two-week extension of a temporary restraining order barring a test removal of PCB-tainted soil, and planned more talks toward an out-of-court settlement.

Town attorney Charles Johnson has contended the maintenance yard is too close to the town's water source and thus poses a threat to the town's safety.

Gov. Jim Hunt has said the test is needed to ensure procedures and equipment will work when the state digs up some 270 miles of rural roadside contaminated by a spill of toxic PCB chemicals last month.

The state is still searching for a permanent burial ground for the soil.

OSHA not run properly, group says

RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina has shown "neglect and indifference to the health of textile workers" in its enforcement of federal dust standards in cotton mills, the Carolina Brown Lung Association charged Thursday.

The association, in a statement read on the steps of the N.C. Department of Labor building, said the state-operated Occupational Safety and Health Administration has been intimidated by some of the major textile companies in the state.

Peace treaty aided by Sinai withdrawal

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Carter said Thursday he has been assured there are no remaining obstacles to a peace treaty between Israel and Egypt.

Carter announced that Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Prime Minister Menachem Begin, brought together on foreign soil for the 13-day summit, advised him they will begin treaty talks in about two weeks, adding that the United States will be "a full partner."

The impetus for the latest Middle East peace development, Carter said, was the Israeli Knesset's courageous action in approving withdrawal of Jewish settlements from the Sinai in return for a treaty—a prime ingredient in the Camp David accord.

Carter said while the United States will be fully involved in the negotiations, he personally will remain on the sidelines. He said he does not expect to take part unless Sadat and Begin also participate.

Carter said he does not anticipate this because the issues remaining to be settled are relatively non-controversial. He said he envisions treaty talks involving high-level officials of Egypt, Israel and the United States below the rank of president or prime minister.

Carter also called for an all-parties conference on the situation in Lebanon, which has been racked by months of civil war.

"There's a tragedy in Lebanon that the rest of the world has not adequately addressed," he said. The president said he does not favor partitioning of the strife-torn nation but suggested negotiations toward a solution that might involve a new charter for the government.

On another matter, Carter expressed confidence that negotiations on a new strategic arms limitation treaty between the United States and the Soviet Union are proceeding well. "We hope to conclude a SALT agreement this year," said Carter, who will personally take charge of the U.S. negotiating team on Saturday when talks are scheduled to move to Washington. "Now the issues are quite few," Carter said.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko began a new round of SALT negotiations earlier this week in New York.

On the domestic front, Carter criticized what he called wasteful spending bills, and said the $10.2 billion public works measure which cleared Congress on Wednesday is unacceptable.

Although he stopped short of saying he would veto the bill, Carter left little doubt that he would do so. And he said he is not intimidated by predictions that some House members would be so angered by a veto that they would vote against a natural-gas bill in retaliation.

"I'm willing to meet the Congress on this issue," he said.

On the Mideast, the president said he had spoken to both Sadat and Begin following the Knesset's vote. "Both of them agree that there are no remaining obstacles toward proceeding as rapidly as possible toward a treaty, he said.

He said the issues that remain to be settled by treaty talks are things such as whether a certain road or intersection would be included in a particular phase of the promised Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai.

"I don't think such details are going to be highly controversial," he said.

Egypt and Israel have promised to sign a treaty by Christmas, or sooner. Israel's pledge to dismantle its settlements satisfied Sadat's major outstanding demand.
