

Consort, Berger to hold classes in music, mime

Members of the Paul Winter Consort and mime artist Keith Berger will conduct workshops in music improvisation and mime during their three-day residency which begins today and culminates in two 8 p.m. performances Friday and Saturday in Memorial Hall.

Mime artist Berger will instruct in the silent art at 1:30 p.m. today in Great Hall. Objectives of the workshop, which is open to the public, include giving insight into movement, characterization and believability, as well as developing an understanding that enhances the theatrical appreciation of even non-performers. Improvisational techniques, non-verbal communication, increasing bodily strength and control, and achieving a creative state are among the goals of the workshop.

The Paul Winter Consort will conduct four workshops in homemade music on Friday. An improvisational workshop will be held at 10 a.m. Friday in Great Hall.

Three other workshops, each with a separate emphasis on reed, string or percussion instruments will be held at 1:30 p.m. Everyone is invited to these workshops regardless of musical experience.

The string class will be in Hill Hall, the reed class in Gerrard and percussion class in Hill Rehearsal Hall.

The Winter Consort workshop atmosphere is light, informal and creative. Everyone should bring their own instrument—the voice and body included.

For more information call the Carolina Union.

News in Brief

Committee votes to reprimand McFall

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House Ethics Committee on Wednesday recommended that Rep. John McFall, D-Calif., be reprimanded for his part in the South Korean influence-buying scandal.

The committee, on a 8-3 vote, found there was sufficient evidence to conclude that McFall, who as majority whip formerly held the No. 3 leadership post among House Democrats, violated House rules by failing to report a $3,000 campaign contribution from South Korean Tongsun Park.

By a 9-2 vote, it cleared him of another charge that he diverted the funds to his own use. A third count—that his acceptance of three gifts from Park created an impression that the performance of his duties might have been influenced—was rejected on a 7-4 vote.

The committee voted 8-2 to recommend to the full House that McFall be reprimanded. The reprimand recommendation was the second issued by the committee in its 20-month investigation into the scandal.

Edmisten testifies in heroin case

GOLDSBORO (AP)—Attorney General Rufus Edmisten testified Wednesday that a news conference he held to announce several heroin arrests prevented publicity about the case rather than encouraged it.

Edmisten was a witness in a pre-trial hearing on a motion to dismiss charges against several persons indicted for heroin possession and sale along with convicted drug smuggler Leslie "Ike" Atkinson.

Defense attorney Robert Levin of Washington, who represents several defendants but not Atkinson, contended that state attorneys, led by Edmisten, have orchestrated adverse publicity against his clients. Edmisten disagreed.

Gay-rights battle on again in Miami

MIAMI (AP)—The Miami area is in for another gay-rights battle. The fight opened Wednesday with petitioners, led by a homosexual-rights advocate, forcing onto the Nov. 7 ballot a broad new equal opportunity ordinance that would ban discrimination based on a wide range of factors—including "sexual or affectional preferences."

In including those four words, this proposal would be similar to a measure repealed in a bitter and well-publicized referendum in 1977.

The new proposal, however, would also include other categories of forbidden discrimination—for example, against pregnant women, union members and people whose native language is not English.

Ian Smith party granted U.S. visas

WASHINGTON (AP)—The State Department, ending two weeks of indecision, announced Wednesday it is allowing Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith to visit the United States in hopes it will contribute to a settlement of his country's 6-year-old civil war.

Ingram blasts tactics of Helms' campaign

By DAVID SNYDER
Staff Writer

The U.S. Senate race quickened its pace this week as Democrat John Ingram chided Republican Sen. Jesse Helms for security measures at the incumbent's Raleigh headquarters and for Helms' lack of personal campaigning.

"My campaign represents what the people of North Carolina want," Ingram said at a reception Monday at Granville South.

Inflation, energy shortages, the unbalanced federal budget and consumer riffs are the big issues, Ingram said. Helms has not confronted the issues as problems of the working class, Ingram said.

Ingram said he believes the nationwide fuel shortage is contrived, purposely imposed by the large oil companies, and is a major cause of the rising inflation rate.

"We need a commitment to alternate sources of energy if we are to get a handle on inflation," Ingram said. The Democrat suggested nuclear fusion as an alternate source of energy.

Ingram said Americans are being ripped off not only by large oil companies, but by large insurance companies that impose high health insurance rates for policy holders who have a history of poor health.

"I will introduce a bill in Congress that will break up insurance monopolies," Ingram said. The policy of health insurers should be to spread risks evenly, rather than to exploit the consumer, he said.

A national health program can be instituted if insurance monopolies are regulated, Ingram said.

Helms, meanwhile, remained in Washington while campaign manager

Tom Ellis shrugged off Ingram's comments and said the senator would begin daily campaigning in about 10 days.

Ingram said he understands from news accounts that Helms' large Raleigh offices were equipped with electronic security devices and television cameras.

"What are they afraid of, to have television cameras in a headquarters that is geared up like a machine," Ingram said.

"Are there shades of CREEP?" he said, referring to former President Richard Nixon's ill-fated re-election committee. "Are there shades of holding the candidate back from public exposure?"

Ellis responded in an interview, saying the Helms headquarters is protected by an electronic burglar alarm, but no television cameras.

"It's a simple burglar alarm. Last year we had our place broken into, and had some files torn up," said Ellis, a Raleigh attorney who managed Helms' 1972 campaign. "I bet there are 5,000 homes in Raleigh with these in them."

Ellis said he assumed the break-in was a case of vandalism.

The Helms operation, from which more than $5 million has been raised with sophisticated, computer-run direct mail solicitations, is largely off-limits to the press.

Ellis has allowed visitors into an area where volunteers work, but refused to allow reporters to see the main area where some 100 paid, full-time staffers work. Ellis said he has turned down similar requests from local reporters and the television networks, but might set aside one day for a media tour.

"We just can't have everybody flying around, talking to the personnel," he said.
