Festifall

Pumpkins and cider flavor street fair

Cloggers clogged and whooped to "Rabbit in the Pea Patch." painters transformed young faces into clowns and shining silver balloons reflected the sun as hundreds of Chapel Hillians roamed through the Festifall displays on a crowded Franklin Street on Sunday afternoon.

Craftspeople from all over the state displayed quilts, pottery, woodcarvings, paintings and macrame. Community organization members talked about their projects; candidates campaigned; shutterbugs peered through cameras and two 7-year-olds chased each other around a man on a bicycle.

Henderson Street was covered with chalk pictures and slogans. One of the artists, Chris Rimer, 10, drew a Duke Blue Devil next to his friend David Kleiner, 10, who was drawing a Carolina Ram's head.

An airman for the past 24 years, Jim Parker of Fayetteville makes an annual trip to the coast to collect wood for his craft. He paints mostly seas scenes on the wood, but he said woodpeckers and owls are also popular.

Robert Wearn of Winston-Salem painted T-shirts with an airbrush while a crowd looked on. People usually know what they want on their shirts, he said. Some of the crazier requests, Wearn said, are unprintable.

Another craftsman, Linelle Brooks of Greensboro, said she took up wood carving about five years ago "because all my children grew up and got married and left home."

Jan Mann of Wildflower Pottery said she got interested in her craft, pottery, when she took a ceramics course at East Carolina University and apprenticed at Jugtown Pottery, one of the oldest potteries in the country.

Dogs in the Animal Protection Society booth fascinated 21-month-old Joel Blue Mountain of Durham. Joel's mother, Marjorie Ferguson, said Joel will get a puppy from the APS Christmas.

For a good night's sleep, Super Plus Tampax tampons

Nightgown by Christian Dior

If you've ever needed extra protection overnight... or on days when your flow is heavy, you'll think Super Plus Tampax tampons were designed just for you. And they were.

Super Plus Tampax tampons give you longer-lasting protection because they're far more absorbent than the average super. Yet they're still surprisingly slim and comfortable. A rounded tip and smooth, highly polished applicator make them extra easy to insert, too.

Now, when you need something more, or when you can't change tampons as readily as you like, switch to Super Plus Tampax tampons. You'll feel more secure during the day. And overnight, too.

Undergraduate Library celebrates 10th anniversary

The Robert B. House Undergraduate Library celebrates its 10th anniversary today with a speech and reception.

The featured speaker at the ceremony is Evan Farber, president of the Association of College and Research Libraries division of the American Librarian Association. Farber, librarian of Earlham College in Richmond, Ind., will speak on "Bibliographical Instruction" at 4 p.m. in 209 Manning Hall.

At 5 p.m. the ceremonies will move to the Undergraduate Library for the reception. Chancellor N. Ferebee Taylor will honor Chancellor Emeritus Robert B. House, who was chancellor when the Undergraduate Library opened.

To further meet undergraduate needs at UNC, Taylor now is working with the UNC-CH media center and instruction support services to make the Undergraduate Library the main location for individual audio-visual use.

Other guests will include five former librarians: Jerrold Orne, Rhoda Channing, William Pease, Jim Thompson and D.W. Snyder.

Jim Phillips, student body president, also will be at the birthday celebration. He will present the library's 100,000th volume, the latest edition of the Yackety-Yack.

Orne, university librarian in 1958, first thought of a library specifically serving the needs of undergraduates. He established a special section in Wilson Library for this purpose.

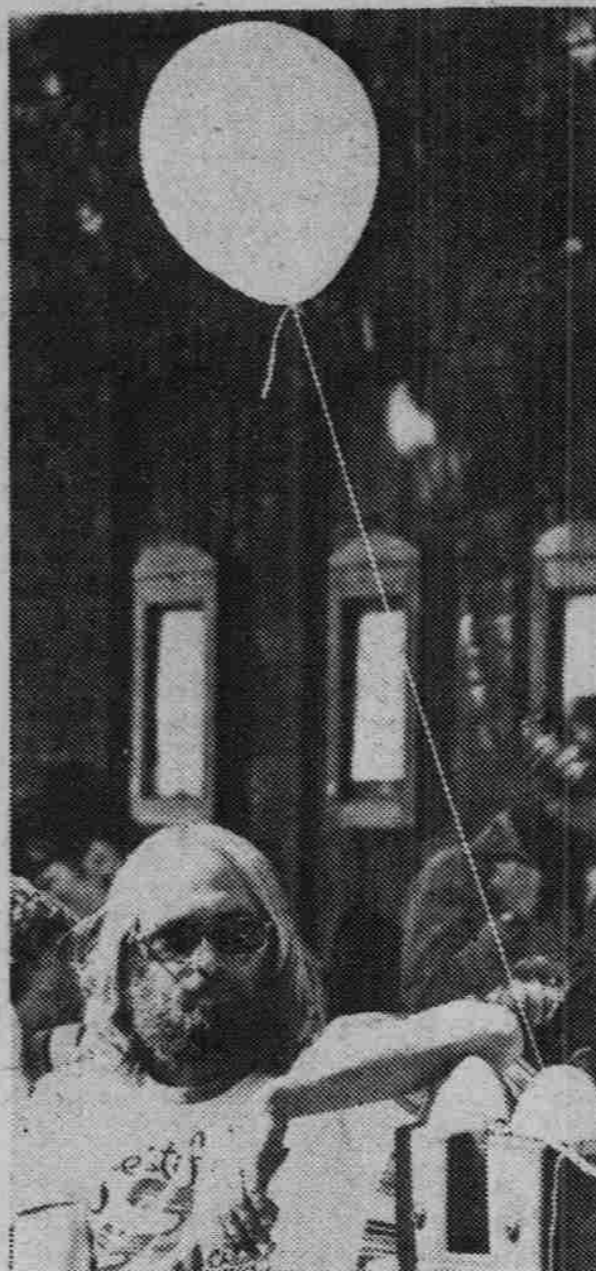

From this space in Wilson, the idea of building a separate undergraduate library, along with the planned Student Stores and Carolina Union, was born.

Within 10 years, the Undergraduate Library opened its doors. The three-story building then had typing and listening areas, microfilm reading facilities, a smoking area, public telephones and an elevator service for the physically handicapped.

The Undergraduate Library's major function is helping students learn to use the 13 other libraries on campus. The library also runs a term-paper consultation and reference-library instruction program with its four full-time and one part-time librarians.

House library is only one of 33 undergraduate libraries in the United States. "Each of the undergraduate libraries is different, but in general, each attempts to meet the needs of a large number of undergraduate students," said David Taylor, undergraduate librarian. "The majority of the collections duplicates the most-used books and periodicals found throughout the library system."
