he resigned in the heat of the Watergate scandal in August 1974.

Carter said although the administration strived during negotiations with Peking to win a public commitment that China's dispute with Taiwan would be resolved peacefully, this was not possible to achieve. The best the United States could do was obtain a statement from the Chinese saying that they expect the matter to be resolved without violence, he said.

Carter also defended his interpretation of Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's initial response to the China decision. The Soviet news agency, Tass, had disputed Carter's assessment as too upbeat. But the president said Wednesday that the Brezhnev statement was "constructive and positive, compared to the anticipation I had...."

On other matters, the president said:

- He had no quarrels with his National Advisory Committee on Women, even though he fired the group's co-leader, Bella S. Abzug, last Friday. Carter said, however, "there has not been good cooperation between the committee and my advisers, or cabinet members or me."

- Despite last week's report by the surgeon general warning anew of the dangers of cigarette smoking, he would continue to back government price supports to tobacco growers. At the same time, he said, "it's a completely legitimate action for the government to point out the dangers of smoking."

- While the United States is very interested in oil and natural gas supplies in Mexico, the administration will not encourage the Mexicans to develop them more rapidly than they desire.

The president held out the hope that Iran would remain a good ally in the future, as he said it had been in the past. Carter said the administration supports the Bakhtiar government and has, within the limits of its ability, encouraged others to support it.

"We would anticipate our good relations with Iran will continue in the future," Carter said. "I have confidence in the Iranian people to restore a stable government and to restore the economic circumstances for the future."

He said the administration had not communicated directly with Khomeini, the Iranian Islamic leader who resides in a suburb of Paris.

News in Brief

New Tenn. governor sworn; pardons probed

NASHEVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Lamar Alexander was sworn in as governor of Tennessee Wednesday night, three days before his scheduled inauguration, to prevent former Gov. Ray Blanton from commuting the sentences of any more prisoners, he said.

The surprise early swearing-in came amid reports that a grand jury would investigate the pardons and commutations granted to 52 prisoners by Blanton Monday night. Some of the prisoners may have been targets of an investigation of payoffs for their release.

Heavy fighting reported in Cambodia

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP)—Heavy fighting was reported Wednesday between Vietnamese forces and units of a resurging Cambodian army which had appeared crushed in the invasion blitz that drove the Phnom Penh government into the countryside.

Thai and Western analysts in Bangkok reported sharp battles and heavy air strikes in and around Kompong Som, Cambodia's only deep-water port, and at Kampot, another port and provincial capital on the Gulf of Thailand.

N.C. Senate approves budget convention

RALEIGH (AP)—The state Senate, pointing to deficit spending as a major contributor to inflation, overwhelmingly approved and sent to the House Wednesday a measure calling for a constitutional convention to require that Congress balance the federal budget.

The resolution, which has the backing of the Democratic leadership in both the House and Senate, would add North Carolina's name to the list of 22 other states that have requested a constitutional convention.

N.Y. men plead guilty to PCB charges

RALEIGH (AP)—Three Jamestown, N.Y., men pleaded guilty Wednesday in a U.S. District Court hearing to charges of dumping 7,500 gallons of PCB-laced oil along North Carolina roadsides last summer.

Robert J. Burn's and two sons still face state charges stemming from spills of PCBs last summer. They pleaded innocent to the state charges in November.

Blacks fare worse on Virginia test

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Far fewer black than white 10th-graders taking a statewide competency test last October scored passing grades, the Virginia Department of Education said Wednesday.

While 89.1 percent of the white students achieved a score of at least 70 on a combined reading and a mathematics test, only 58.2 percent of the black students reached or bettered that grade. "We don't really have any answer as to why that happened," said Dr. Richard Boyer, assistant superintendent for program development.

Hawkeye Whitney went to the line after a foul by Black. Black and State's Kenny Matthews traded shoves as Whitney shot his first free throw, and official Lennie Wirtz whistled a technical on Black. Whitney hit one of two free throws and then connected on the technical. Matthews hit from 25 feet a few seconds later to give the Wolfpack a one-point lead.

"I went to get position in front of him," Black said. "He kept pushing me aside, and I kept pushing him back. I pushed him once and then the referee called a technical on me."

The Tar Heels cruised to a 40-19 halftime lead as the Wolfpack struggled with a 30 percent field goal mark. And when State missed, they never got a second try as the Tar Heels won the rebounding battle 22-12.

But the Wolfpack was as hot in the second half as it had been cold in the first half. Matthews, Whitney and Austin hit at will to begin the second half and after State cut the lead to 15 with 14:30 to go Carolina went to the Four Corners.

"I was pleased with our Four Corners," Smith said. "We got good shots out of it. Our second-half offense was excellent. Theirs was super."

Four Tar Heels scored in double figures. Al Wood had 21, O'Koren, 15, Bradley, 13 and Rich Yonakor, 10. The Wolfpack was led by Whitney's 19, Matthews' 14, and 13 each from Tiny Pinder and Austin.

Concerning Carter's performance in foreign relations, 76.2 percent of the students and 68 percent of the faculty members said it has been good. The survey noted that the researchers began collecting data the week after the Camp David peace talks.

The final question asked was "If you could select the next president, who would you choose?" The survey states that the respondents, especially the faculty, hesitated to answer this question because they felt the question was unrealistic. This feeling, the survey states, partially accounts for the high percentage of "no opinions." Forty-eight percent of the faculty and 28.7 percent of the students said they had no opinion.

Of those students surveyed who did voice an opinion, 24.9 percent said they would choose Jimmy Carter. Twenty-two percent of the faculty said they also would choose Jimmy Carter. Ted Kennedy was the second choice in both groups. However, Gerald Ford placed third as the students' choice and Jerry Brown held that same position on the faculty list.
