

DOT proposal bypasses negotiation stall

By CAROL HANNER
Staff Writer

The state Department of Transportation has proposed adding a southern bypass to Chapel Hill's thoroughfare plan in a move that ends a two-year standstill on negotiations, Mayor James C. Wallace said Thursday.

Thomas W. Bradshaw Jr., DOT secretary, wrote a letter to Wallace containing several proposed southern corridors.

With some variation among the proposals, the corridor would stretch from Carrboro's western town limits on N.C. 54, go south of U.S. 15-501 bypass and end on N.C. 54 at New Hope Creek.

The mayor said the Board of Aldermen probably would decide Feb. 12 on a date for a public hearing with DOT officials to answer citizens' questions.

The aldermen would then vote on the proposal and send it back to the DOT, Wallace said. Then negotiations on the entire thoroughfare plan will continue.

The town and the DOT have been at odds since 1976 when the town rejected the state's thoroughfare-plan proposal for central Chapel Hill.

The plan called for making Franklin and Rosemary streets one-way thoroughfares to ease traffic flow. Residents objected because they said the plan would alter the character of Chapel Hill.

Tension between the town and the DOT has increased because of a Chapel Hill lawsuit to prevent the state from building an Interstate 40 link near Chapel Hill.

"Somebody has to make a move (on continuing negotiations)," Wallace said. "The DOT has proffered this proposal. We have to start with the fundamental things we can agree on."

Wallace said the sections of the thoroughfare plan dealing with Chapel Hill's interior will not be discussed until after the southern bypass issue is decided.

Alderman Jonathan Howes said construction of a bypass would probably take 10 to 15 years to complete. "The town probably has the leverage now to get a southern loop. We may not have it later," Howes said. Although aldermen only heard of the proposal Wednesday, Howes said he thinks most will like it.

Bradshaw's letter said the southern bypass would permit Chapel Hill to improve existing streets such as the U.S. 15-501 by pass without having to pay the penalty of increased state and regional through-traffic. Wallace said the southern bypass might open the way for making the heavily used 15-501 bypass into four lanes.

John L. Temple, UNC vice chancellor for business and finance, said the University supports the DOT's proposed southern loop.

"The effect in the long term would be to make the campus more easily accessible from the east, west and south," Temple said.

Hunt budget would raise TV funding

By JIM HUMMEL
Staff Writer

The state's public television network may be able to produce more of its own programming if a $1.3 million increase in its funding contained in Gov. Jim Hunt's proposed budget is approved by the General Assembly.

George Bair, director of the network, said the proposed increase might help WUNC-TV's efforts to produce its own shows, including documentaries on current issues.

"We're really excited about the prospects," Bair said. "There are a number of ways the money could be used."

The funding increase would give the network an extra $704,000 the first fiscal year of the biennium and $694,000 the second year.

"At this point I really don't know how the money will be used," Bair said. "One of the strongest things we can do, though, is to broaden our efforts in public affairs."

Bair said the network possibly could deal with many issues that don't always make the headlines but nevertheless are problems in today's society.

"Because of our money restrictions we haven't been able to do thoughtful documentaries on major issues," he said.

WUNC-TV studios... more programming possible?

"Just within the past 12 months we've gotten 125 program proposals from various groups. They included recommendations from our own staff, state agencies, private citizens and independent film producers.

"I'd say out of those 125 programs, 60 will make it into production in some form or another."

Since its first broadcast in 1955, the staff of WUNC-TV has grown to 90 full-time and approximately 60 part-time employees.

Bair said he would like to see the network produce programs on art criticism and art history. The network may also produce programming in cooperation with the new National Humanities Center in the Research Triangle.

Bair said out of the 3,600 hours a year WUNC-TV broadcasts, about 10 percent is produced in North Carolina.

"Hopefully with additional money we'll be able to raise that percentage," he said.

Governors vs. Hunt

Requests by UNC Board of Governors, recommendations by Gov. Hunt

ITEM	REQUEST	RECOMMENDATION
University continuing operations	$683 million	$681 million
New programs	$66.3 million	$33 million
Capital improvements (including NCMH)	$117.1 million	$72.7 million
Faculty salary increase	10 percent	7 percent
Total	$1.1 billion	$933 million

(The "total" figure includes funding for the Board of Governors' entire jurisdiction, including North Carolina Memorial Hospital, the N.C. School of the Arts and the Agricultural Extension programs. The rest of the categories pertain to the 16-campus University system.)

state aid to private colleges from the current level of $600 per in-state student to $750 by 1980-81.

UNC officials have consistently opposed such an increase to private schools, as has the North Carolina Association of Educators.

"That's a mighty big jump," said Roy S. Carroll, UNC acting vice president for planning. "It looks like they want to hold the line on salaries but not on an increase like this."

"We recommended against this increase," UNC President William C. Friday said. "If it is approved it will mean North Carolina will be spending more tax money than any other southeastern state in assisting its private colleges."

Hunt's budget recommendations include:

- $5.8 million for a four-story art department building adjacent to the Ackland Art Center.

- $22.3 million to complete construction of the School of Veterinary Medicine at NCSU in Raleigh.

- $3.4 million for major renovations of the south wing of N.C. Memorial Hospital, intensive care units, emergency room and the ground floor.

- $6.6 million to accommodate the first group of third- and fourth-year student at the ECU School of Medicine, and $1.7 million for an addition to Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

- $1.6 million to further implement aspects of the state's desegregation plan, including the Minority Presence Scholarship program and black faculty development.

The fate of the University money now rests in the hands of the General Assembly, and UNC's interests will be well represented this session in both the House and the Senate. The state senators and representatives from the districts that include Orange County have shown good track records when the University's interests have been on the line. Sen. Charles Vickery of Chapel Hill has served on the Senate Higher Education Committee, and will chair the Senate Board of Governor's Committee this session.

Most importantly, however, Vickery will sit as vice chairman of the powerful Senate Finance Committee, where the budget faces its final test. Vickery has said he will "work for 100 percent of the University's interests."

Sen. Russell Walker of Asheboro, the second senator from Orange County, earned a position on the Senate Appropriations Committee, which also will handle the University funding.

"I will support the University spending outlined by the governor while on the appropriations committee," Walker said.

Craig Phillips, superintendent of the state Department of Public Instruction, raised concern that the percentage of state funds spent on public schools has decreased while the University budget has taken a bigger bite of the total budget in recent years.

Walker disagreed, however, saying, "I think the big increases in past sessions have gone to the community college system rather than the University system."

But Walker affirmed his support of the increased University spending. "There's always a rivalry (between the public schools and the University). This is where you get in trouble with Hunt's rebate plan. Maybe we should spend the money on public education."

In the House, Rep. Trish Hunt, D-Chapel Hill has said the University rates high on her list of priorities also, especially faculty salary increases. Hunt also admits University interests may have been visible in the governor's plan because of his respect for Rep. Edward Holmes of Pittsboro, Orange County's second representative and chairman of the powerful House Appropriations Committee.

News in Brief

Troops, protesters clash in Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP)—Troops in tanks ran down protesters' cars, royalist gangs rampaged in the streets and guerrillas attacked from across the Iraqi border Thursday as Iran, sinking deeper into chaos, searched for a way out of its political limbo.

Between seven and 21 persons were reported killed and more than a dozen others wounded in bloody fighting across the country. "Because of the chaos, the nation is headed for a new type of dictatorship," Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar declared in a nationwide broadcast address Thursday night.

Alexander says he cannot block pardons

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Gov. Lamar Alexander said Thursday that he probably won't be able to block the 52 pardons and commutations issued by his predecessor, Ray Blanton, two days before Blanton was ousted from office in disgrace.

But Alexander said he will at least be able to delay the release of 17 prisoners who became eligible for immediate release under Blanton's Monday night order. Meanwhile, a federal grand jury reconvened Thursday to continue its investigation of whether clemency was for sale in the Blanton administration.

Poll shows most people conserving energy

A Carolina Poll shows that most people in North Carolina are trying to conserve energy in some way.

The poll, conducted by the UNC Journalism School, shows that 70 percent of 889 adults interviewed by telephone said they were cutting back on heating to conserve energy. 25 percent were installing energy-saving devices such as storm windows and insulation and 11 percent were switching sources of energy.

Former PTL officials say funds diverted

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Hundreds of thousands of dollars in donations for the PTL evangelical television network's foreign ministries was diverted to pay for other projects and bills at home, according to three former vice presidents of the network.

The three—Bill Perkins, former vice president for international administration, Roger Flessing, who was also a board member at the network, and Robert Manzano, former missions director—recently resigned from the Charlotte-based network.

San Francisco fire closes tunnel

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—San Francisco-bound motorists inched their way across the Bay Bridge in a seven-mile-long line of cars Thursday after a fatal fire forced the closure of an underwater rapid transit tunnel.

Investigators examined the Bay Area Rapid Transit train that was charred in Wednesday evening's accident, but at a morning news conference, BART General Manager Keith Bernard said the cause of the fire was still unknown.

One fireman was killed and at least 35 persons, including 25 firemen, five BART employees and three passengers, were hospitalized as a result of the 4½-hour fire.

1979 Personal and Real Property Tax Listing

January is the month in North Carolina in which all personal and real property is to be listed for county property tax. All motor vehicles, household items, etc., as well as real estate owned is to be listed in the county in which it is situated as of 1-1-79, according to the N.C. Statutes, 105-301 and 105-304.

The Orange County personal and real property tax forms will be mailed to all residents who made a tax listing in 1978 as a convenience for listing by mail. New residents and those who wish to list in person can go to their individual township list-taker whose schedule is posted below, or the Orange County Courthouse in Hillsborough.

All Listings Must be Completed by January 31, 1979.

To avoid long lines, list by mail on forms from our office. They may be obtained by calling the Tax Supervisor's office in Hillsborough at 732-8181, or 967-9251, or 688-7331, or 227-2031.

The Homestead Exemption Law was changed in 1978 to give up to $7,500.00 in real and household personal property value off of the total value if the income of the owner of this property did not exceed $9,000.00 for 1978. To qualify for this exemption the owner must complete this section on the back of the tax listing form which applies to this, and be 65 years of age or permanently or totally disabled to work.
