

Morgan backing pro-draft bill

Sen. Robert Morgan
...wants draft back

A growing concern by many military experts that the all-volunteer army would be insufficient to handle an emergency has led to a move in Congress to reinstate the Selective Service draft-registration process.

Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., is introducing a bill calling for the registration of all 18-year-olds, possibly including women. The renewal of the draft registration would cost $10 million in the first year, and would reactivate Selective Service bureaus throughout the country.

"We need an inventory of force," said Gibson Prather, Morgan's press secretary. "A study has shown that if we do have the draft inventory, we could reactivate the draft in two weeks in the event of an emergency. Without it, it would take 60 days."

Prather said the Department of Defense needs 10,000 men conscripted within 30 days if there was a crisis. Many experts agree that the all-volunteer army would not be sufficient in a crisis.

Under Morgan's bill, all qualified persons would have to register this October.

The bill, when introduced in Congress last session, received only 13 votes. This time, Morgan expects to get much more support, Prather said. Gen. David Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Gen. Louis Wilson, commandant of the Marine Corps, both have endorsed Morgan's bill.

Clint Fuller, spokesperson for Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said he had not talked to Helms about draft registration, but he said Helms voted against the measure last year.

In the House of Representatives, a similar bill has been introduced by Rep. Charles E. Bennett of Florida. The bill is called "Military Registration and Mobilization Assessment Act of 1979," and it calls for the president to commence registration on Oct. 1. It also calls for a report to Congress by June 30 on a more efficient system of draft registration. Under the bill's provisions, those who are drafted would serve three months of active duty with three years of service.

Secretary of Defense Harold Brown and many House leaders have called for a draft-registration bill, said Ted Daniel, executive assistant to Rep. L.H. Fountain, D-N.C.

Maurice Janowitz, a UNC expert on selective service and author of several books on the subject, said he disagrees with the draft-registration emphasis.

"I think the important issue is to make the volunteer force work. I would be in favor of registration if it would move the country to national service, which would allow a person to choose, within limits, domestic or military service, such as the Peace Corps or social work."

Janowitz, a visiting professor of sociology, said he sees four steps in improving the present military force. He said that two-year enlistments should be offered to include college-bound persons. Also, military recruiters should put an emphasis on educational benefits, he said.

He also called for an increase in internal utilization and management manpower, and said the benefits of national service should be emphasized.

stage

In PRC shows, parts generally go to professionals first, graduate students second and, if there are any left, to undergraduates third. Summing up the psychological effect of such a hierarchy, sophomore drama major Dan Brady said, "You're No. 3. Students can't help but be demoralized when they're treated as third-class citizens."

Haskell Fitz-Simons, who coordinates Lab Theatre activities, said, "There's no reason in the world for undergraduates to come here anymore. It's ludicrous. They'd get nothing from it."

"There's no reason anyone would hire a graduate of UNC—they don't have the curriculum," he said.

Fitz-Simons graduated from UNC with a bachelor of fine arts degree in drama, which has been replaced by the more liberal bachelor of arts. He is in his second year of working for his master of fine arts degree.

Students have complained that the AB program does not provide them with enough acting training. For the BFA, five acting courses (18 semester hours) were available. Now only two courses (nine hours) will be taught to undergraduates.

Housman said the number of acting courses has nothing to do with quality. "You can give as much in two first-rate classes as in four mediocre ones," he said.

Housman explained that the BFA degree was phased out over the past few years because it was impractical and uneconomical, without a huge staff, to try to give students professional training.

He said training students adequately for the professional theater involves "too many specialties" for a liberal arts curriculum to handle. He said that it was "dangerous and misleading" to allow people to believe that a BFA would lead them into the marketplace.

He added that the department thinks the AB degree is a more accurate label for the program. UNC offers its undergraduate drama majors.

Next year the department plans to sponsor two all-student productions, which will be given "exactly the same support as PRC productions," Housman said.

Also, he said the department intends to improve its undergraduate training program by hiring a new teacher to coordinate laboratory activities and direct at least one of the all-student productions.

voter

do not obtain a domicile in a county where you simply go to school," Cheshire said. "This is the presumption we shall make until the court says otherwise."

The N.C. Supreme Court may decide the domicile issue when it rules on a voter-challenge case currently before the bench between the Orange Committee and the Orange County Board of Elections.

Gerry Cohen, voter-registration chairman for the county Democratic Party, deemed the proposed changes important also in the wake of a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision which ruled as unconstitutional a Texas presumption that a student is not legally domiciled in the county where he goes to school.

Cohen also said the proposals would not make it harder for anyone with proof to challenge a voter.

"The law would stop only those who wish to use the challenge process for harassment like it was last year," Cohen said.

med tech

"Our class is a unique situation in that we're like one big family," Futrell said.

Futrell said interest in the program as well as membership in the Med Tech Club, which is open to any interested person, would be higher if people were more informed about it.

"There are so many opportunities, so much attention and personal care," Futrell said. "You know you're important because you can help take care of people who really need it—it makes you feel good."

News in Brief

Bakhtiar vows to answer force

TEHRAN, Iran (AP)—Prime Minister Shapour Bakhtiar said Sunday he would not oppose the creation of a "shadow" government by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, but he warned he was prepared to "answer Molotov cocktail for Molotov cocktail" if his foes resort to force.

Opposition sources said they expect Khomeini, who returned to Iran Thursday after forcing Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi from the country, to designate the head of a "provisional government" within a week.

Khomeini followers marched in several small, peaceful demonstrations Sunday in various parts of Tehran. Some carried signs and shouted slogans warning of a "holy war" if the 78-year-old Moslem religious leader is not allowed to establish an Islamic republic.

Teng slows pace near end of visit

SEATTLE (AP)—Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, apparently tiring, slowed his pace Sunday as he neared the end of his American tour.

His morning activities included only a brief courtesy call paid by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, in Seattle to help promote a soccer game in his capacity as the honorary chairman of the North American Soccer League, and a meeting with U.S. Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash.

Jackson said Teng had "indicated he would give public assurances" that China's emigration policies will conform to the requirements necessary for the country to attain the low tariffs and credits it wants to enable it to buy expensive modern equipment.

Flood says he regrets mistrial

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. Daniel J. Flood, saying he is innocent, has expressed regret that his bribery and perjury trial ended in a mistrial, apparently caused by one holdout among the jurors.

"I maintain my innocence of any wrongdoing in the charges that were considered against me," the 75-year-old Pennsylvania Democrat said Saturday night after the deadlocked federal jury of eight men and four women was dismissed, ending nearly three days of deliberations.

Juror Johnnie Lyles said the panel was 11 to 1 for conviction on six of the seven bribery counts and that "it was just a contrary old man who held out on everything...he didn't want evidence, he wouldn't hear anything we had to say."

Inflation program faces tough week

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two key elements of President Carter's anti-inflation program face a trying week in Congress as one House panel continues to ponder wage insurance and another questions the legality of the wage-and-price guidelines.

The House Ways and Means Committee ends six days of hearings Monday on the president's novel plan to use tax credits to give inflation insurance to workers who abide by his 7 percent wage guidelines. Meanwhile, the House Government Operations Committee's subcommittee on commerce, consumer and monetary affairs opens hearings Monday on Carter's overall anti-inflation program.

UCC to start workshops to aid minority students

The University Counseling Center is offering three group workshops for minority students this month. The workshops are designed to meet the needs and interests of minority students based on results of a UCC survey of minority peer advisers last fall.

The "Educational-Occupational Information" workshop provides an introduction to the resources of the Educational Occupational Information Library.

Participants will have the opportunity to view videotapes on the academic departments to help them choose a major. Participants also will be able to learn about information sources that provide educational and career information for blacks and American Indian students.

The workshop will be conducted from 7:30 to 8:15 p.m. at the UCC.

The "Selecting a Graduate School" workshop will provide guidelines for choosing a graduate program that best meets the student's personal and career goals. This workshop will be conducted from 7 to 7:45 p.m. Feb. 12 at UCC.

The "Standardized Testing" workshop will help participants learn to use their knowledge more effectively on multiple-choice exams. The workshop will deal with different test styles and decision-making steps. The workshop will be held 8 to 9 p.m. Feb. 12.

Students interested in attending, or who need more information should contact UCC at 933-2175.
