

Passing game uses many receivers

By BILL FIELDS
Assistant Sports Editor

While quarterback Matt Kupec has been the catalyst in pacing North Carolina to a 170-yard-a-game passing average, his receiving corps has been varied with a different figure stepping in each week to have a big day.

First it was flanker Phil Farris, who snared touchdown passes of 43 yards against South Carolina and Pittsburgh. Then non-scholarship tight end Mike Chatham caught three passes for 75 yards against Cincinnati. He came back for 10 catches, 144 yards and two TDs against Wake Forest.

Another flanker, junior Wayne Tucker, was in the spotlight when UNC played N.C. State, catching two passes—one a flashy 43-yard play—for two touchdowns.

Against East Carolina, junior split end Jeff Grey, who had made grabs in five previous games, had seven receptions for 87 yards, including an 18-yard TD connection with Kupec, who has thrown for 13 touchdowns in 1979.

In addition to the above receivers, back Doug Paschal, who has played both fullback and tailback, has been an outlet for Kupec 17 times this season, averaging eight yards a reception. Split end P.J. Gay and tight end Shelton Robinson have made five and two catches, respectively.

The varied array of receivers for Kupec has caused difficulties for opponents' defenses, and when one receiver has gotten tighter coverage than another, he has been able to find an open man.

Grey, the latest end to have a big day, says Kupec's skill allows him to pick out a target as long as he has adequate time to release a pass.

"As long as Matt has the time, which he has had, he can find a receiver," Grey said. "If some receiver has a big game, the other team might have a tendency to look for him more."

Grey said Kupec's targets each have different specialties. Flanker Tucker has the speed, Grey has blocking ability and a knack for getting open, and Chatham is very sure-handed in a crowd.

"We all complement each other," Grey said. "I'm not a 4.1 sprinter. Tucker has the speed. I can block pretty well."

Grey hasn't broken a long pass for a touchdown so far, but he believes he is capable of going all the way—just when the defense thinks he can't.

"I can still get deep. One time they don't think I can get deep, I will."

UNC head coach Dick Crum, the man responsible for shuffling the receivers in and out of the lineup, is aware of each end's special talents.

"Our best two receivers now are Grey and Tucker," Crum said. "Tucker's come on week by week. He's improved by leaps and bounds. Jeff can make some miraculous catches. His only drawback is that he doesn't have 4.5 speed."

Farris, since his fast beginning, has been on the bench much of the last few games after making several key mistakes such as fumbles and dropped passes.

"After some of the critical mistakes he's made, we decided to give some of the younger players an opportunity to see what they can do," Crum said. "Some of them were under him waiting in line."

To help establish the running game, UNC went to a two-tight end offense at times against N.C. State and ECU. Because the split end is removed from the game in the double tight end set, Grey sees less playing time, but he said UNC must use the formations which work well.

"We have to do whatever we have to do to win," Grey said. "The two-tight ends really worked with State and against East Carolina."

Grey said much of the passing success should be credited to Kupec, who now is 82-for-144 (57 percent) for 1,156 yards.

"We've been practicing (the passing game) for two years," Grey said. "(Kupec) has got it down. He's gotten able to drop back and spot the secondary receivers."

Varsity women win in soccer

Janet Rayfield's six-goal performance highlighted the UNC women's varsity soccer team's 7-0 victory over the UNC women's soccer club Monday night.

The soccer club stayed tough with the varsity throughout the game and had some scoring opportunities, but they could not contain Rayfield and her teammates.

Rayfield opened the scoring midway through the first half with a goal off an inbounds pass from Molly Current. Rayfield's second goal came off of a rebound from an Emily Scruggs' shot.

Rayfield later headed in a Scruggs corner kick to complete the first-half scoring.

The third goal drew the most praise from varsity head coach Anson Dorrance: "It was a picture-perfect play."

Rayfield added three second-half goals, and Scruggs scored the seventh goal.

The win gave the varsity a 6-0 record. They face Duke Thursday and have two games scheduled against the highly regarded Grasshopper soccer club Saturday and Sunday.

Crum expects rough game from Terps

Going into Saturday's Atlantic Coast Conference game with Maryland at College Park, Md., North Carolina football coach Dick Crum says he expects a physical game to be decided on the line of scrimmage.

"They base their whole football program on being strong and physical and playing good defense," Crum said Tuesday at his weekly press luncheon.

The game's outcome, according to the second-year coach, will be decided "in the trenches."

"I don't think there's going to be any magic secret as to how the game is going to be won," he said. "It's going to be won on the line of scrimmage."

Maryland, riddled with more injury problems than any other team in the ACC this season, will return some of its injured players for Saturday's game and the Terrapins' wide-tackle six-man defensive front is different from the five-man lines most college teams use.

"It's different from everybody else's," Crum said.

In talking about the 24-24 East Carolina game, Crum said UNC's lackluster second half was more a matter of momentum than of technical problems. He said the Tar Heel defense's failure to recover any of the Pirates' seven fumbles was a big factor.

"Our play in the second half, from a technical standpoint, didn't fall off that much. We had difficulty maintaining momentum."

Split end Jeff Grey said the tie was more because of a determined East Carolina team.

"We didn't play that badly against East Carolina," Grey said. "We had 475 yards in total offense. The first half Matt (Kupec) was completing everything he threw. In the second half East Carolina made the big play when they had to."

Grey said the Tar Heels are going to have to combine an effective running and passing game to defeat Maryland.

"We're going to have to move the ball down the field consistently," he said. "We can't look ahead. We've got to take one week at a time."
