

Hofstetter, Heels win ACC meet

By BERT WOODARD
Staff Writer

When the going gets rough, the tough get going. Just ask North Carolina's Gary Hofstetter and N.C. State's Julie Shea, two cross country runners who led their teams to meet championships this weekend.

Hofstetter captured the Atlantic Coast Conference title with a course record-breaking time of 30:42.8 Saturday in Clemson, S.C., in leading the Tar Heels to the conference team championship. Carolina, which won its first title since 1971, finished with 37 points to Maryland's 62.

N.C. State followed with 77; defending champion Clemson, 87; Virginia, 122; Wake Forest, 145; Duke, 173; and Georgia Tech, 174.

Shea, who captured the individual honors in the AIAW Southern Regional II meet in Murray, Ky., led her Wolfpack team to the regional championship. North Carolina sent Nancy Radford, Maria Daniel and Lindy Appen and did not qualify for the nationals as a team, but UNC did qualify Radford, who finished 14th out of almost 70 runners with a time of 17:31. Daniel finished 33rd and Appen 34th.

Coach Bill Lam's men harriers dominated the ACC meet at Clemson. Four other Tar Heel runners finished in the top 12—Jimmy Cooper, 7th; Todd Hamilton, 8th; Doug Slack, 9th; and Mark Whitney, 12th, all within 10 seconds of each other. "We expected our runners to perform well, but we didn't expect them to group that well," Lam said.

Lam said another surprise was Clemson's finish. The defending champions had several runners in the lead in the first couple of miles of the 10,000-meter course, but they lost it, he said. "They kind of fell apart. But it was our strong group finish that won it for us."

One of UNC's top 10 finishers, Todd Hamilton, a senior from New Castle, Pa., was thrilled but not surprised with Carolina's performance. "We had run and defeated every team in the conference before Saturday (except Tech) so we went into the meet confident," he said. "We wanted to finish with four in the top 10 and we did."

Hamilton said that the difference between last year's second-place finish and this year's win can be credited to better training the week before the meet, and the team's closeness during the race.

"Last year we let up during the week before the meet. This we worked harder and were overall stronger," he said.

During Saturday's meet, UNC's top-12 finishers (except for Hofstetter) talked with each other throughout the race. "We were all running so close, that it was easy to talk and encourage each other. It's always good to see Gary do well, but, when the whole team wins, it feels great."

The men return to action this weekend in the district meet in Greenville, S.C. "Some of the best teams in the south will be there," Lam said.

Grasshoppers jump by Heels

By GEOFFREY MOCK
Staff Writer

The McLean Grasshoppers displayed their world championship form in sweeping the UNC women's soccer team 7-3 and 4-0 in a weekend series.

They were the first defeats of the year for Carolina, which saw its record drop to 6-2.

In Sunday's game on Fetzer Field, the two teams were battling through a scoreless tie when, midway through the first half, Chris Galiani broke through the UNC defense and scored to draw the first blood for the Grasshoppers.

Ten minutes later, Galiani scored again off a Kathy Kelly crossing pass to give the visitors a 2-0 lead at halftime.

The Grasshoppers kept the pressure up as the second half started, keeping the usually powerful Carolina offense silent. Monique Warner added an insurance goal 15 minutes into the half and Kelly quickly clinched the game with the Grasshoppers' fourth score.

Carolina mounted several last-ditch efforts late in the second half, but the strong Grasshopper defense, led by goalie Kim Alfriend, repeatedly turned back any threats and registered the first shutout against UNC this year.

The Grasshopper attack was just as potent in the first game Saturday night on the Astroturf, where they jumped out to an early 3-0 lead. Seconds before the first half ended, Janet Rayfield put the ball in the goal past Alfriend's slide tackle to put Carolina on the board.

UNC came out more aggressively in the second half and were more successful in their attack, but the Grasshoppers never allowed the Tar Heels to come closer than two goals.

After the club team scored off of a corner kick to increase the lead to 4-1, Rayfield kept the game within reach with her second goal, but the Grasshoppers came right back with a score to make it 5-2.

Carolina closed the gap with a Tracy Wiren goal, but this was neutralized by two Cathy Galleher goals to make the final score 7-3.

Despite the two losses, UNC coach Anson Dorrance was not disappointed in his team's performance. "I am pleased. There was little chance that we could beat them. They were faster and tougher than we were. They're the best."

Dorrance said playing teams of high quality like the Grasshoppers could only help the women's soccer program at UNC.

Games against strong clubs can help the program in another way. Almost all of the Grasshoppers' players are in high school and will soon be graduating. The weekend series allowed the visitors to become acquainted with UNC. Several mentioned they are interested in coming to Carolina.

The prospect of playing with some of the Grasshoppers must be more enticing to the Carolina team than playing against them.

UNC golfers 2nd in Lady Tar Heel

By CHRIS POWELL
Staff Writer

Florida State came from two strokes off the pace Sunday to move into first place by three shots over first-round leader North Carolina in the Lady Tar Heel Invitational.

Today's play concludes the 54-hole tourney played at UNC's Finley Golf Course, and Carolina coach Dot Gunnells said she is confident her team can take the championship if the players improve their putting.

Carolina, which entered two teams, has both squads in the top five. The blue team is 14 strokes behind FSU in fifth place. Florida International is third and Miami-Dade fourth.

"We're pleased to have two teams up there, but we should still be in first," Gunnells said. "If the girls putt better, I think we can win."

The Heels' top team shot 317 Saturday and 322 Sunday for 639. FSU's lead has come from rounds of 319 and 317 for 636.

"It'll probably take a team score of under 315 to win it," Gunnells said. "Florida State can be beaten if we can get four good scores out of our first team."

"We just had a couple of bad scores today," said UNC's Stephanie Kornegay, who is tied for 10th individually. "The greens were a little faster (Sunday) than they were Saturday, and it took us a while to get used to them. If I could have putt, I'd have shot in the low 70s."

Kornegay had 80 Sunday, one shot behind Carla Daniel's 79 and three behind Maren Long's 77. Long is the only one of those three on the blue team. Her two-day total of 158, along with Daniel's, is good for a share of seventh place individually, tops on the UNC team.

Gunnells said the pin placements wouldn't be as tough today as they were Sunday.

"Putting was touchy around the holes Sunday," she said. "There won't be as many little hills to put over (today)."

"If we can save some pars by making those nagging 10 footers, our chances of catching Florida State will increase," Daniel said. "They caught us from behind. There's no reason we can't go out and take it away from them."

The two top individual performers so far are Florida International's Nancy Rubin at 151 and Palm Beach's Barb Bunkowski at 153.

"The tournament is running very smoothly," Gunnells said. "All the visiting coaches have mentioned how Finley is in such great shape and how it is a good course to host a tournament. A few have said I should put in a bid to have the nationals here in 1981."

Play begins at 9:30 today, and a winner should be determined late in the afternoon.

"We all believe we can win," Kornegay said. "It's our home course, and the championship is there if we can just go out and take it."
