

A month older, Tar Heels the team to beat in the ACC

Heel Scott Bradley ...has batting streak

Sports writers like to look back over seasons and find turning points—games or events that seem to mark where a team changed almost overnight into an almost totally different animal.

Most attempts to find such events are merely exercises in 20-20 hindsight. In most cases, no single incident over a two-month period has that great an impact.

The 1980 Carolina baseball season has not been one of those cases. The turning point for this year came on March 23 in College Park, Md.

On that Sunday afternoon, the Tar Heels lost 14-13 to Maryland in a game they should have won. The Terps scored seven runs in the last two innings to come from a 13-7 deficit to win. It left Carolina 14-10 overall and 3-1 in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Since then, Carolina is 18-2 overall and 8-0 in the ACC. More important, an 8-4 win Wednesday over Wake Forest in Winston-Salem gave Carolina something they have not had since 1969: a regular season ACC championship.

"We've reached our first goal," UNC coach Mike P. ... said Thursday after the win had sunk in. "I am just happy for the team."

Team has been the key word for the Tar Heels all season. Although the team is not without individual stars—players that will almost assuredly be named all-ACC—it has been the ability of the Tar Heels to work well as a unit that has spelled success.

David Poole

The brightest of the individual stars has been third baseman Scott Bradley, a sophomore from Essex Falls, N. J. Bradley tripled in the second inning of a game against Massachusetts exactly one month ago today, and he has had at least one base hit in each of the 25 games Carolina has played since.

But Bradley is only one of six starters hitting higher than .300. The team is hitting .316. There isn't enough room in this newspaper to list all the hitting records that have fallen or probably will fall before this year is over.

There is P.J. Gay, a senior outfielder, who is hitting .364 and has driven in the winning runs in at least two key conference games. There's Dwight Lowry, a junior, who is hitting .354 and has driven in 33 runs with 57 hits—including 14 doubles and four homers. Pete Kumiega and Lloyd Brewer are hitting .348. Kumiega with 16 doubles and 37 RBIs and Brewer with eight homers and 46 RBIs. Greg Schuler, another outfielder, is hitting .303. Shawn Dean, currently nursing an injury, is at .343.

But the three regulars who are currently below .300 tell the story of the 1980 season just as well as do the other six. Jim Rouse, Craig Shumock and Chris Pittaro have had some fine games, most of them coming when someone else was having a bad day.

Pittaro, for example, has hit better than .400 during the last two weeks. Rouse can steal a base better with a pulled hamstring than most can healthy. And Shumock has driven in 28 runs on 40 hits, seven of those homers.

Then there's pitching. The stars of the staff have been James Parks and Mark Ochal. Parks has been in 19 games, all in relief. His record is 6-0 with four saves in 56-1/3 innings of work. Ochal is 7-2 and hasn't lost since March 3. He has four complete games in 10 starts, most of those coming against tough conference foes.

But there are others. David Kirk is 6-1, with a team-leading ERA of 2.69. Shayne Hammond is 4-1 and Bruce Wood is 4-0. Hard-luck Mike Brewer has a 1-5 record but really hasn't pitched that poorly. The staff ERA is 4.15—which is nothing to boast about, but the staff record is 32-12 and that's the one that counts.

There are other names familiar to UNC baseball fans. Barney Spooner, Joe Reto, Mitch McCleney, John Cleetwood, Bill Musser and Franklin Roberts have had their moments.

And it is a collection of all their moments that has given the Heels the success of the 1980 season. There are games left, to be sure. A three-game trip this weekend with game Sunday against Connecticut to be carried live over a national cable TV network, will be followed next week by the ACC Tournament, in which the Heels are seeded first.

Since that Sunday in March when the season took a turn for the better, the Heels are 14-0 at home. It was a shame the title-clinching win couldn't have been in front of the Boshamer Stadium bunch, but sometimes things don't turn out just right.

UNC track, tennis golf teams in ACC tournaments

From Staff Reports

Injuries are considered to be a hard fact of the sporting world, but you'd have a tough time convincing the Carolina men's track team of that as it limps into the Atlantic Coast Conference Championships today and Saturday in Raleigh.

The Tar Heels enter the meet with three performers who did well in last year's championships questionable because of hamstring injuries.

Defending 400 meters champion Wayne Miller and Sam Brown, who was third in that event a year ago, are doubtful participants for the championships, coach Joe Hilton said. Both are members of the mile-and-quarter-mile relays teams, also.

The third injured Tar Heel is Bob Walsh, who suffered an ankle injury at the beginning of the outdoor season. Third in the 1979 ACC decathlon event, he also pulled a hamstring but he still is looking to compete.

With the injured threesome and other members not 100 percent, Hilton said the team's hopes of repeating its third-place finish in the ACC indoor meet aren't good.

"State and Virginia are better outdoors," Hilton said. "And if we don't do better with our injuries, we might have a tough time getting fifth place."

Hilton said distance runner Gary Hofstetter and high jumper Lee Shuler are expected to vie for individual titles.

Other Tar Heels expected to do well in the distances include Todd Hamilton, Doug Slack and Todd McCallister. Jimmy Cooper will run in the steeplechase while Skip Miller has a good chance to win the 110-meter high hurdles, Hilton said.

In Winston-Salem today, the ACC men's tennis championships begin, with Clemson and defending champ N. C. State installed as the teams to beat.

The three-day tournament, featuring play in six flights in singles and three more in doubles, is scheduled to run Friday, Saturday and Sunday, with most of the singles action in the mornings and doubles in the afternoon on the Wake Forest courts.

North Carolina lost to both the Tigers and the Wolfpack during the regular season, but the Tar Heels have won or shared 22 of the 26 team titles decided in ACC history.

Clemson, which was runner-up last year, did not face State in the regular season. The Tigers currently are ranked No. 11 in the country and have had 15 straight dual-match victories, including wins over Florida and Georgia.

The North Carolina men's golf team begins play today in its conference championships at the Northgreen Country Club in Rocky Mount, a 6,800-yard layout.

Seven of the top 10 individual finishers of a year ago are in the field, including defending champion Todd Smith of N. C. State.

In addition to Smith, Wake Forest will be shooting for its third consecutive team championship and its 13th title over the past 14 years. The Tar Heels interrupted the Deacons' streak with a victory in 1977 at North Ridge Country Club in Raleigh.

The first five finishers from last year are all returning for a shot at the 54-hole title. Gary Hallberg of Wake Forest, runner-up in 1979, returns, along with UNC's Frank Fuhrer, third last year and the Tar Heels' top player this spring.

Fuhrer has placed in the top five each of the past two years.
