

Classic barbershop singing featured

By BOB ROYALTY
Staff Writer

Bluegrass has Union Grove, rock has Chapel Thrill, and now barbershop has Brouhaha. The first annual Brouhaha concert, an afternoon of close-harmony, took place in Forest Theatre Sunday afternoon.

The afternoon was mild and pleasant; most of the weekend hangers were gone by that time, or were at least just a dim memory. A crowd of around 70 people, mainly families and friends of the performers, gathered in the outside arena to hear four close-harmony groups sing. Others, not wishing to spend a dollar, listened from the woods.

The groups were the Sweet Briar Sweet Tones, the Duke Pitchforks, the Carolina Blue Quartet and the Clef Hangers, UNC's own student group now familiar to free-flick audiences through their slide show. Manley Roberts, a senior and one of the original members of the Clef Hangers, said, "One of the nicest things about the concert was that a lot of the people who came were old friends who had followed us all along."

The Sweet Tones of Sweet Briar were the first to perform. An all-female group singing close-harmony, without a deep bass, runs the risk of sounding tinny. This was not a problem, however, on the whole, despite a consistently sentimental repertoire. The group's tone was sweet and pleasant to listen to.

The Clef Hangers then sang their first set. The group has pizzazz, spontaneity and stage presence in addition to an excellent ensemble sound and some fine soloists.

Music

They performed favorites such as "When I See All the Lovin'," "Rubber Ducky" and "Get A Job."

The Carolina Blue Quartet, composed of four UNC faculty members, was next. The group concentrates on old style barbershop and sang songs many would consider classics. They did a fine rendition of "Coney Island Baby."

The Duke Pitchforks finished the first round of music. They are in many ways a clone of Ivy League groups like the Princeton Footnotes and Yale's Baker's Dozen. The Pitchforks are about half graduate students, and some of the members are in fact former Whiffenpoofs and S.O.B.'s (Sons of Orpheus and Bacchus) from Yale. They sang some good songs, including Tom Lehrer's "Bright College Days."

After singing a second set, the Sweet Tones brought the Clef Hangers out and taught them the Rice Krispies "Snap, Crackle and Pop" round. As Saunders said, "The Clefs always seem to perform better with girls in the concert." Both groups showed a lot of sparkle and seemed to enjoy themselves.

The concert finale, another round by the Clef Hangers, was the best part of Brouhaha. The Clef Hangers were performing for a home crowd (and an admittedly biased reporter), and this was the last time the seniors would be singing. The Clefs gave it all they had. Each senior's performance was especially good: Tandy "Chico" Brown's rendition of a Spanish ballad, Steve Watkin's "Honeycomb" and Alan Ross' "Blue Moon." Also, after a standing ovation, Roberts did his popular version of "Sixty Minute Man."

Dance concert

The Carolina Dancers will present their spring concert at 8 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday in Memorial Hall.

The program will feature the premiere of Diane Elliot's Le Renard Dansait, which was completed during her February residency at UNC-CH.

The concert also will include Another Day by Carol Richard, two works by Jack Arnold and a piece by Marian Turner.

Journal of students' work to be given out next week

The UNC-CH Journal of Fine Arts, a compilation of research articles and interviews by UNC graduate and undergraduate students, will be ready for distribution next week.

The journal is produced and edited by the Fine Arts Festival Committee and explores issues raised during the 1979 festival, "Performance and Process." The journal features interviews with artists involved in the 1979 festival.

Hans Haack, a conceptual artist, discusses the social and political implications of his work, which often attacks the power of large corporations.

Nozake Shange, author of the play, For Colored Girls Who Have Considered Suicide When the Rainbow Is Enough, describes her performance practices of the production and discusses what she considers student apathy of the 70s.

Howard Stein, former drama teacher at Yale University discusses new movements in the theater.

Jonas Mekas, an avant-garde filmmaker, discusses his work.

Lucas Foss and Tom Johnson, composers and critics, describe the influence of John Cage on other contemporary composers and Cage's theory of aleatory music.

Copies of the journal will be available free to students and teachers for a limited time. Those interested should sign sheets that will be posted in the various fine arts departments.

CAMPUS CRITIQUE presents!
"S.A.R.C." Short Argumentative Research Cartoon
It has become increasingly obvious that many students need summer employment.

Some will have to settle for petty jobs such as corporate law firm management, bio-technical engineering advisor, or the vice-president of the United States.

Research shows, however, that a few lucky ~~students~~ students will get rich quick by selling "ALL-PURPOSE TOOTH-PASTE/CAR POLISH/INSECTICIDE" (with artificial emulsifiers and natural drugs endorsed by "The Clods.")
