Heels beat Duke

in first round game

By DAVID POOLE Assistant Sports Editor

Some people collect stamps. Some collect coins. Still more collect butterflies. Scott Bradley collects school records.

The Essex Fells, N.J., sophomore added two more UNC records to his collection Tuesday as the Tar Heels beat Duke 13-6 at Boshamer Stadium in the first round of the Atlantic Coast Conference baseball tournament.

Bradley had three hits and five RBIs in the game, giving him 85 hits and 55 RBIs on the season. The old marks were 84 hits by Roy Clark and 52 RBIs by Jim Atkinson, both set in 1979.

With the win, Carolina dvances to the final rounds of the league tourney beginning Thursday at N.C. State's Doak Field. Carolina will play State Thursday at 12:30 in the doubleelimination event. State defeated Virginia 3-1 Tuesday in Charlottesville to advance.

"I learned a lot last year from Roy (Clark)," Bradley said after breaking Clark's record for hits in a season. "I want to find him now and tell him I broke his record." Bradley's three-hit performance also marked the 30th straight game in which he has had at least one hit.

Duke was no pushover, despite the final score. In fact, Duke was in the game until the seventh inning when the Heels got seven runs to put the game away.

In the top of the first, Duke second-baseman Kevin Rigby nailed a two-run homer off Mark Ochal to stake the Blue Devils to a 2-0 lead. Carolina tied it with two in its half of the first. Pete Kumiega doubled in Craig Shumock and later scored while Lloyd Brewer was tagged out in a rundown as he tried to steal second.

Duke got two more in the second on a single by Bobby Brower, but Carolina tied it in the same inning on a two-run single by Bradley. Bradley homered in the fourth to make it 6-4, but Duke cut it to 6-5 on a bases-loaded single by George Gawdun.

The big play in the UNC seventh was another run-down play on an attempted double steal. Chris Pittaro broke for second and Dwight Lowry for home. The throw to the plate got away from Duke catcher Mike Stopper and Lowry was safe. Then,

Scott Bradley rounds second base after homer ...sophomore had three hits. Heels won with two already out in the inning, consecutive hits by Shumock, Bradley, Joe Reto, Brewer and Greg Schuler and another hit by Jim Rouse accounted for six runs.

Ochal pitched a complete game but was not overly effective in picking up his ninth win. "I pitched the worst possible game I could and still win," Ochal said. "I must have been that close to getting yanked."

Coach Mike Roberts agreed. "I don't think he pitched a very good game," he said, "because his fastball wasn't moving, and he was getting all his breaking stuff up."

Carolina had 15 hits, including four doubles and a home run. Shumock, Lowry and Pittaro had two hits each.

The Tar Heels are now 36-13 overall.

Program grows under Roberts

By DAVID POOLE Assistant Sports Editor

· Second of three parts

Mike Roberts is a man possessed. God has possession of his soul. His family owns his heart. Baseball occupies his mind. Consequently, baseball always seems to have Roberts on the go. If you want to have a 45-minute conversation with him. you'd better set aside two hours in which to have it.

His telephone seldom sits idle for a long time. But, between accepting congratulations for winning the regular season Atlantic Coast Conference title and setting up reservations for his team's trip to another school, Roberts will talk baseball any tine.

Roberts ascended to the head spot at UNC in 1977 after serving for three years as coach-designate under long-time coach Walter Rabb. When Rabb retired after 31 years as head coach, Roberts had a task ahead of him.

"I feel that the best thing in the situation was Coach Rabb himself," Roberts says. "He's such a tremendous person and he wanted the baseball program here to continue at the highest level it possibly could."

Roberts says he felt no pressure, which isn't hard to understand when you remember he took his first team to the College World Series in Omaha, Neb., and finished third.

"The College Baseball World Series," he says, "is one of the nicest events held anywhere. I would like for any youngster that comes through the program here to have the opportunity to play in it at least once."

Carolina senior Jim Rouse agrees, saying he remembers the trip to Omaha as one of the high points of his career at Carolina. "That was the best trip we made," Rouse says, "and it was great for the team. Everybody should get that chance."

One of Roberts' goals is to win a national title in baseball for Carolina. Five years ago, any ACC coach with that as a goal would have been dismissed as a dreamer. The baseball power has long been in the Deep South and Far West, where the weather allows year-around play.

The national title is something you have to shoot for," he says. "I don't think there is any sense in playing if you don't think about it."

Carolina's opponents are often quick to say that Carolina's program has grown because of the freedom Roberts has in running it and the money that has been spent. Roberts doesn't

"I don't feel like we have any more than a lot of other schools do," he says. "I do think that we have worked very hard to use what we do have wisely. We have worked very hard to improve our field and make it into a major league facility. That has been done with the cooperation of our athletic department."

College baseball has changed since Mike Roberts was a catcher for Rabb in the early 1970s. "More people are working at the game harder," he says. "There are better players in every program and when that happens you have to work hard to stay on top."

Roberts says college baseball is improving as more high school players decide to go to college rather than straight into the pros. "The players that go to good college programs get as much experience, and probably better overall experience, than they do if they go into pro ball," he says. "A youngster is also seeing how much it costs to live these days, and they want to get as much of their education behind them as they can so they can have something to fall back on."

Mike Roberts says he is a simple man, but he is not so simple that he has gone unnoticed by others. Pro scouts who sit in Boshamer Stadium say they know they'll get a fundamentally sound baseball player when they draft someone Roberts has coached.

Softball team sweeps Catawba

Sharon Speer tossed a no-hitter in the first game of a doubleheader and Cindy Ford had five hits in the two games as the UNC softball team swept Catawba College 10-0 and 8-6 at Hinton James Field Tuesday.

The Tar Heels snapped a five-game losing streak in improving their record to 20-11. Catawba dropped to 8-17.

UNC makes its final regular season appearance in a doubleheader against N.C. State at home Thursday. After those two games, the Tar Heels meet UNC-Greensboro Saturday at Graham, N.C., in first round action of the NCAIAW regional tournament.

UNC softball coach Susan Clark said she was disappointed with the team's play of late. "We're making too many errors and aren't hitting the ball like we did earlier in the year," she said.
