UNC senior players go in basketball draft

By Cliff Barnes

All five seniors of the UNC basketball team have been picked in the National Basketball Association draft.

Forward Mike O'Koren was chosen in the first round by the New Jersey Nets as the sixth overall draft pick.

John Virgil, who didn't get a lot of playing time last season at UNC until James Worthy was hurt, was tabbed in the third round by Golden State. Center Rich Yonakor, best known for his hustling play, was picked by San Antonio in the same round.

Jeff Wolf, who shared time at center for four years, was picked by his favorite childhood team, the Milwaukee Bucks in the fourth round, but probably will go to Italy.

Guard Dave Colescott, coming off a knee injury that sidelined him at the end of the year, was picked by the Utah Jazz in the sixth round.

"We do a pretty good job getting them drafted," head basketball coach Dean Smith said in a telephone interview. Keeping them there is the hard part, he said.

The class of '77 sent Walter Davis, John Kuester and Tommy LaGarde to the NBA, Bruce Buckley went to Europe before returning for law school, and Woody Coley tried out for the pros but was cut.

There are nine active Smith-coached players in the NBA today and two pro coaches Billy Cunningham, Philadelphia and George Karl, an assistant at San Antonio.

"The chances of a pick making it after the first round is less than 50-50," Smith said.

O'Koren was picked early but Smith thought he could have been the first pick depending on a club's needs. "If the team picking No. 1 had wanted the best pure forward in the country they would have gone with Mike O'Koren," Smith said. "He was the first pure forward picked and I believe Michael Brooks was the next in line."

O'Koren went sixth and Duke's Mike Gminski went seventh, both to the New Jersey Nets.

"At least Mike won't have to get used to somebody completely new at center," Smith said. "They know how each other plays."

Smith said that Gminski has a defensive question mark that has to be answered for the pros. "Mike, on the other hand, doesn't have any question marks; he is a complete player. He'll make the team."

O'Koren, a native of Jersey City, N.J., will be able to play before a home crowd with the Nets. "I was very happy that Chicago didn't go with Mike. They had expressed interest," Smith said. "Now he's still in the eastern section of the country and he is with a great organization."

Virgil said he was surprised that he was picked by the Golden State Warriors. "I thought I'd maybe go to Houston, Los Angeles or Detroit," the 6-foot-6 Elm City, N.C. native said. "I hope I can play some next year if I make the team," Virgil said. "I understand they're going through a major rebuilding program. They had a terrible year last year."

"Virgil and Yonakor have the best chance of making it, after O'Koren," Smith said. "Because they were picked early in the third round that indicates that those teams evidently need somebody like them."

Yonakor was picked by San Antonio in the third round and he was a little surprised at the team and the position. "My goal before last season was to be drafted in the top four rounds," a jubilant Yonakor said by telephone. "This is more than I could have asked for. I finally made it."

The Spurs are an explosive offensive team but other than that, Yonakor said he doesn't know that much about them. "I'm not that big an offensive threat," he said. "If they were looking for hustling play and defense, I think they'll be pleased."

Yonakor has been on crutches for several weeks after spraining his ankle 30 minutes into a try-out in Italy. He liked Italy and coach Smith said if Yonakor does not get a no-cut contract in the NBA he will advise him to go.

Wolf also went to Italy and will probably go there despite being picked by his home-state Milwaukee Bucks. "I could play before my family and people who have followed my career," Wolf said.

"There's a good possibility that I'll be going to Italy," Wolf said. "They offered me a good deal and it's an educational experience."

Colescott also went to the best team to give him a shot at a job, Smith said.

"I was surprised he didn't go earlier," Smith said. "One coach told me they were going to pick him somewhere in the fifties, which is the third round."
