

Excitement, confidence abound as Virginia looks to '80 season

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA.—For the first time in several years, the folks here are really excited about the University of Virginia's football team. "I can't wait to get the season under way," flanker Greg Taylor said. "This year I'm the most anxious for the season to start of any I've ever been associated with in football," said tailback Tom Vigorito.

And an assistant coach said, "It used to be that when you talked about Virginia football, someone would pour you another drink and change the subject. Now, the people are really interested in what we're doing."

Why all the excitement? In just four years, head coach Dick Bestwick has accomplished what only one other Virginia coach has been able to do since 1952. He had a winning season (6-5) in 1979.

And Virginia fans now are hoping that Virginia can have its first back-to-back winning seasons since the 1951-52 campaigns.

The players and coaches are optimistic, as statements are being heard in Charlottesville that would have been unheard of in the past.

"We want to go out with a big bang," quarterback Todd Kirtley said when sportswriters met with the Virginia players last week on Operation Football tour. "It's important for our players to play in a bowl game."

"We're beginning to touch our potential. We know we have a shot in every game—we can beat anybody."

Why the optimism? Because Virginia returns 39 lettermen, including 16 starters. Plus, thanks to a vigorous weight program administered by 330-pound Bill Dunn (nicknamed "The Tank"), the players are also bigger and stronger.

"It's much more pleasurable to look out and see 20 to 25 guys who weigh 250 pounds or better instead of seeing only two my first year here (1976) who couldn't even play," Bestwick said.

Lifting weights has helped the team mentally as well as physically. "All the players, especially the linemen, have been psyching each other out by getting bigger and stronger," said defensive back Bryan Shumock, brother of UNC baseball player Craig Shumock. "It helps develop a confidence thing."

The weight program can be seen in the offensive line, where the five senior starters (tackles Ron Kort and Mike Sewark, Preseason All-Conference center Brian Musselman and guards Kurt Pierce and Dan McKillican) have a combined weight of 1,300 pounds or an average of 260 pounds per man.

Tailback Tom Vigorito, who gained 1,044 yards last season, assessed the offensive line. "Last spring they were huts," he said. "This year they're houses."

"It will be a pleasure to work behind those five guys," Kirtley added.

And, that line has now played together for three years. "We were pretty much groomed as a unit," Pierce said. "Now we are confident veteran players—we're more relaxed."

"We don't have to worry too much about our blocking assignments and if we get beat up physically anymore, but can concentrate more on our blocks."

Bestwick will run the I-formation this year, and he hopes Vigorito will run the ball 20 to 25 times a game.

Vigorito's running mate will be Mark Sanford, not Greg Taylor, who gained 933 yards last year. Bestwick moved Taylor to flanker, a position that had been left thin by graduation, in hopes of opening up the offense.

"Greg is a burner," Bestwick said. "They better have on their track shoes when he goes deep or they won't catch him."

"Hopefully, we've got a line that can give the quarterback protection and can get the ball to Taylor when he's open."

Kirtley is excited about the move. "With Vigorito and Taylor, we have the potential to break tackles, make big gains—we have the capability to score on every play."

Taylor, who worried about his new role at first, has accepted the change, saying his best shot at making pro football may be at wide receiver.

"The move gives us a real deep weapon," he said. "Last year we were basically a running team but now we can be a threat all the time."

Offense is not the whole Virginia story, however. Last season the Cavaliers finished among the top 15 in the country in giving up the fewest points per game.

Six starters return from that unit. The anchor will be All-America candidate Stuart Anderson. Last season the junior nose guard led the Cavaliers in tackles with 125.

Other top returnees include 278-pound tackle Dave Sullivan, Shumock, senior Quentin Murray and linebacker Bryan Holoman. The one weak spot could be in the secondary which lost All-ACC strong safety Tony Blount. Shumock is the only returning starter in the secondary.

Though the Virginia staff is optimistic, it isn't being cocky, because the 1980 schedule includes games with seven teams that had winning records last season.

Quentin Murray (91) at work ... Ron Brooker helps out

"We don't have any sleepers," Shumock said. "We will have to be mentally prepared for all the games. We can't have an off day."

Kirtley agreed, "We have tough games week after week. We have to go out and prove ourselves."

But, for the first time in a long time, the Virginia players believe they have a chance at the ACC crown.

"It used to be that we would line up against teams like Clemson and we knew we'd get beat because we were outmanned," Taylor said.

"Now we've come to the point where anybody we line up against we feel we can beat."

This new confidence should be evident on the field, Vigorito said. "A lot of people used to come to Virginia games to enjoy themselves and have a good time," he said. "Now, they're going to come to see good football being played, not just to have a good time."

When was the last time you heard Virginia folks talking like that?

IMs under new format

Tag football and grailmural softball open an intramural season filled with new programs and formats.

"The whole idea has been to make everything in the program better," Assistant Intramural Director Janis Matson said. "We've been able to hire some extra people and we want to make sure that everyone is doing their job."

A new self-scheduling method for football has been one of the most noticeable changes in the intramural format: A team will now schedule a game for itself one week in advance at any time allocated to that team's division. A team also can play as many games in a week as it wants, as long as four are played during the regular season. After the regular season, any team that has played the required four games will advance automatically to the playoffs—regardless of the team's record.

"The teams can play whenever they want, so there shouldn't be any forfeits," Matson said. "Also, teams can play anybody they want, so that should make for better competition."

The new format also allows for interdivision contests—provided each team involved agrees to the matchup.

"A team can play outside of their league if the two captains come down together and sign up," Matson said. "So, conceivably, a men's team could play a co-rec team."

"If things go as well as we hope, we'll use the same format for all of the other major sports," Matson said. "If it fails, we may go back to the old system."

Matson's job, as well as that of fellow assistant director Rob Frye, was made possible by the increase in student fees allocated to the intramural program in a referendum last spring. In addition, the department hired two student assistants and started longer hours for free play in Woollen Gym.

"The facilities will be open for free play until midnight this year," Frye said. "The time will be the same for the new Fetzer Gym when it opens next semester."

A new Faculty-Staff league also is being formed. The league will have five sports each semester and also may include a point system.

"We're just sending out the mail on that, so we haven't had too much of a response yet," Frye said. "But, I think they'll like having their own league."

In addition to the new format, coaches will rate the officials after each game and will have to make known any protest as soon as the problem arises, rather than waiting until after the game. Officials, in turn, will rate the sportsmanship of each team. Although the rating will have no effect this year, a poor sportsmanship rating could keep some teams from advancing to the playoffs next year.

Play in football and softball begins Sept. 8 and all team entries must be in by Friday. Coaches who have not attended the required information meeting must come to Woollen Gym at 7 p.m. Thursday. Those teams without a representative at the meeting will not be allowed to participate.
