

Grid club plays for love of game

Think of college football and one thinks of huge crowds, tailgate picnics and marching bands. It is more than just a football game—it is an event which involves fans as much as players.

It isn't always that way. Even at UNC, where big-time college football dominates Saturday afternoons, there still exists a group of 35 guys who play football not for glory but simply because they love the game. The group is the UNC Club Football team.

"They play because they just don't want to quit playing after high school," club coach and president Joe McCullen said. "It really takes a lot of dedication, because we don't get big crowds or a lot of publicity."

Because club football does not have the glamour of its varsity counterpart, McCullen said the club lost a number of good players each year, a type of weeding-out process.

"We miss out on a lot of good athletes because they come to a game and see only a 100 people there," he said.

What is left are those who like to play, and McCullen said, they definitely can play.

The majority of them played high school football, and McCullen, in his third year with the team, said this was by far the best team he had played on.

"We have everyone back on offense and defense from last year," he said. "We've got some additions that have helped when we lost a couple of starters due to injuries."

Lynn Featherstone (the team's faculty adviser and former coach) has said in the 10 years he's been here this is either the best or one of the two best teams he's seen."

McCullen said the team had a number of outstanding players, including a few he said easily could play small-college football. Defensive end Steve Flowers and offensive tackle Carl Kirby played in the North Carolina North-South Boys Home All-Star Game at the conclusion of their high school careers. The defense, unscored on in the last two games, is anchored by linebackers Chris Froman and Butch Matthews, both former standouts at Raleigh's Sanderson High School. The offense is led by two Greensboro Grimsley products, receivers Keith Black and Lee Evans, and by hard-running tailback Mark Yost. McCullen, who quarterbacked the team before a recent injury, was a two-time all-conference selection at Elm City High School.

McCullen thinks the club has a good chance to win the Magus Cup, given annually to the North Carolina Club Football Champion. The team plays a 10-game schedule, which includes six conference games against club teams from around the state and a trip to Florida to play St. Leo's College.

Although the team is off to a 1-1-1 start, McCullen said he was not worried. Two of the games were against community teams, and he said, the team was two bad plays away from being undefeated. The club beat perennial power and big rival UNC-Wilmington 25-0 Friday night to open its conference schedule.

Last fall the team won its division in the conference but, lost to the Appalachian club team in the state playoffs.

"UNC has never won the state club championship," McCullen said. "This is going to be the year."

The club's next game is against Robbins Community Club at Navy Field at 8:30 p.m. Friday.

Notes: Intramural badminton and floor hockey play starts Monday. . . Mandatory volleyball and soccer organizational meetings will be held in Woollen Gym Tuesday through Thursday. . . Faculty-staff golf deadline is Friday. . . Referees are needed for IM soccer, volleyball and floor hockey. . . IM racquetball, tennis and football playoffs start October 13.

Carolina booters record 6-2 victory

John Boettigheimer scored his seventh and eighth goals of the season to lead the North Carolina men's soccer team to a 6-2 victory over Campbell Wednesday at Fetzter Field.

With a total of eight goals so far, Boettigheimer is now halfway toward breaking the school record of 16 scores held jointly by John Ghanim in 1959 and Louis Bush in 1967.

A slight drizzle and a muddy field kept players slipping throughout the game, but the Tar Heel offense found the goal early and started pressuring the Camel defense. Carolina wasted several scoring opportunities until Sean Naber scored at 24:10 into the half off an assist from Adam Abronski.

Once on the board, the Tar Heels went on a rampage, scoring three times in the space of 10 minutes. Boettigheimer scored the first of his goals with 17:17 remaining, assisted by Chris Heyn and Tim Ensley. Ricky Marvin followed less than a minute later with assists from Heyn and Nick Donnelly. Junior Eric Blum completed the first-half scoring with his second goal of the season, assisted by Jay Ainslie and Naber.

Boettigheimer made the score 5-0 by putting Camel goalie Mike Oxendine's fumble into the goal with Mike Fiocco and Ainslie getting assists.

North Carolina's attempt for a third straight shutout was thwarted on a Uwe Schmacher penalty kick midway through the second half.

Billy Propster scored UNC's sixth goal of a Donnelly corner kick, but the Camels came back to cut the final margin to four with a Bill Bowers' goal with two minutes left.

The men take to the road this weekend against Lynchburg at 2 p.m. Saturday.

UNC defeats ASU in volleyball match

The UNC volleyball team got back on the winning track Tuesday night and defeated Appalachian State 15-8, 15-5 and 15-4.

Coach Beth Miller shuffled players in and out of the match and tried out new offensive strategies.

"I think our match showed that we have a very flexible team," Miller said. "Depth is important when you have these all-day tournaments and you have to give your starters a rest."
