Garwood reports Americans still captive

CAMP LEJEUNE (AP) — Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood reported seeing "a couple hundred other Americans" still in captivity in Vietnam and was upset that authorities didn't question him about it, a Navy psychiatrist testified Thursday.

Since his return to America nearly two years ago, there has been speculation that Garwood had information about other Americans still in Vietnam. Thursday's testimony was the first light shed on the subject during his 10-week trial because such information previously was ruled irrelevant to the case.

The 34-year-old Marine, who was in Vietnamese hands for 14 years, declined comment after the court session.

to women by making them feel unclean. The only time a woman in an advertisement is not beautiful and alluring is when she's a housewife and over thirty, Kilbourne said.

Even when women are shown with jobs, they inevitably become the super woman that works, takes care of the kids, feeds the gerbils, and never lets her husband forget he's a man. Kilbourne quipped.

Kilbourne urged open communication between sexes as a way of combating the untruths exemplified in advertising.

U.S. support of Salvadorian junta criticized

By JOE MORRIS
Staff Writer

The support given by the United States to the present junta in El Salvador is the main obstacle to democratic revolution in the Central American nation, a spokesman for the Salvadorian Democratic Revolutionary Front said Wednesday night.

Mario Velasquez told a crowd of more than 200 in Manning Hall that "if the United States withdrew its support, the Democratic Revolutionary Front (FDR) would be the new government within a week."

Emphasizing that the FDR is a "pluralistic coalition for democracy" with overwhelming popular support, Velasquez tried to dispel American suspicions that the revolutionaries are "communist and crazy."

"We are a coalition of people from different points of view, ideological tendencies and social backgrounds that have come together to create a new society for fundamental change," he said.

Velasquez said the Duarte junta presently in power had no popular base, but represented a small, land-holding elite. He called U.S. claims that the Duarte government was a moderating force distortions, citing that all moderate elements have been excluded from the 15-month-old junta. He said that power was presently in the hands of a military committed to "complete genocidal elimination" of opposition.

"No government responsible for these deaths can be called moderate," Velasquez said. Eleven thousand have been killed in El Salvador since last January. "You can smell it in the streets," he said.

Velasquez said the Salvadorian government had lost control of the military and of the economy. "It is very difficult to find basic necessities," he said.

Redistribution of land and restructuring of the military, both unfulfilled promises from the Duarte government according to the FDR, are among the major reforms it advocates. The organization also hopes to reduce the nation's 60 percent illiteracy rate.

The presentation, sponsored by the Institute of Latin American Studies and the Carolina Committee on Central America, was part of the FDR's worldwide effort to "present the just nature of our struggle." Citing support from Mexico, Panama and social democratic parties throughout Europe, Velasquez said the FDR's appeals have been successful.

The United States suspended economic and military aid to El Salvador after four American women were killed last month, but aid was resumed shortly thereafter. Last week, military aid to the junta was escalated.

Asked about the effect U.S. military involvement might have on the revolution, Velasquez said, "Direct intervention will only make the process longer."

In a memo to department and agency heads, Reagan ordered:

- A 15 percent cutback in spending earmarked for travel in the 12 months beginning last Oct. 1. This does not apply to members of the military moving to a new assignment.
- A 5 percent reduction in money earmarked for consulting and management contracts and special studies and analyses.
- A ban until further notice on purchases of furniture, office machines and other equipment. Reagan exempted military equipment and equipment "needed to protect human life and property."

- Restrictions on Cabinet and other presidential appointees to avoid "unnecessary expenditures in setting up their personal offices. Appointees are not to redecorate their offices."
- Reagan said his order did not prohibit "reasonable and necessary cleaning, painting and maintenance or structural changes essential to the efficient functioning of an office."

In explaining the exemption for the White House quarters, press secretary Brady said "there's a great deal to be done in the way of painting, cleaning up and fixing and that's going to be done in the family quarters."

fouling out with only nine points. The Deacs were led by Johnson's backcourt running mate Mike Helms, who scored 16. Jim Johnstone and Alvis Rogers added 12 for the Deacons, who are now 14-1 overall and 4-1 in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The Tar Heels, currently ranked 17th, are now 13-4 for the year and tied with Wake at 4-1 in the ACC.

Carolina's biggest statistical edge came on free throws. The Tar Heels hit 24-of-31 at the line while Wake converted 10 of its 12 efforts. The Deacons were whistled for 28 personals, while Carolina committed only 13.

Carolina led 28-19 at the end of the first half largely behind the play of Wood and Worthy. Wood and Worthy each scored 11 first-half points.

The low-scoring first half was due to the sticky defenses played by both teams and the patience in looking for the good shots.

Carolina took its largest lead of the half with 1:09 left as Wood converted a three-point play to give Carolina the 28-19 lead it enjoyed at the half.

Wake Forest was led by Jim Johnstone and Mike Helms who scored six each. Johnson was 0-of-5 with only one point at intermission.

Carolina freshman Matt Dorherthy saw his first action since injuring his hand five weeks ago with 15:09 to go in the first half. He hit his first shot of the game — a 20-footer.

Wake Forest hit a mere 29.6 percent from the floor with an 8-of-27 performance in the first half.
