Heels have field day in 100-60 blowout

By CLIFTON BARNES
Assistant Sports Editor

A letdown after the Wake Forest win? Nawww.

"I didn't expect anything like this," Coach Dean Smith said after his Tar Heels blizzarded Georgia Tech 100-60 Saturday afternoon at Carmichael Auditorium.

"A letdown can happen and it does happen to some teams," forward James Worthy said in a jubilant Tar Heel dressing room. "But we try not to think about the past. We have our minds right for each game."

"I was worried about us getting ready after our big win at Wake Forest," Smith said. "Our defense just dictated the game the first 10 minutes."

Nine minutes into the game Carolina held a 23-4 lead behind the offense and defense of Al Wood, Sam Perkins, James Worthy, Jimmy Black and Mike Pepper. That's everybody, and that's just how the game went.

Everybody played and did his part. Eleven Tar Heels played in a first half that saw the Yellow Jackets pull to within 11 when Carolina failed to score for almost three minutes. But in the last five minutes of the half the Tar Heels found their early form to outscore Georgia Tech 19-9 and take a 48-27 halftime lead.

In the first five minutes of the second half Carolina opened up a 61-29 margin over the newest member of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The Carolina starters were already trickling out with nine minutes to play.

Wood left with 24 points in only 27 minutes of play. Perkins added 18 points and a game-high 11 rebounds, while Worthy left with 13 points in 23 minutes. Black and Pepper scored eight points each.

"Wood continues to play well, both offensively and defensively," Smith said. "But, if you had to point to one player as the key today it would be Jimmy Black. He made everything go offensively and defensively."

"It's good to have a blowout," Smith said. "It gives our reserves, who work so hard in practice, a chance to play."

And play they did.

Backup center Chris Brust scored four points and grabbed six rebounds, second highest on the team. Jeb Barlow, Eric Kenny and Cecil Exum each canned six points. Freshman Dean Shaffer scored five points in only six minutes of playing time. They were his first points as a Tar Heel.

The "Blue Team" went 10-of-14 from the field and 7-of-9 from the free throw line. But, more importantly, the reserves hit the century mark.

It was the first time since Carolina scored 102 against Maryland in the 1979 ACC tournament.

"We were looking for the hundred," Exum said. "It's kind of a tough goal to reach in basketball so we wanted to do it."

But when Exum hit a 15-foot jumper with 1:08 left to give the Tar Heels a 98-58 lead the Jackets decided to keep the score under 100.

Georgia Tech went into their version of the Four Corners behind by 40 points. The crowd didn't like it and neither did Shaffer — who fouled Tech's Stu Lyon with 19 seconds remaining.

Lyon, who was Tech's leading scorer with 19 points, hit both free throws. Then Carolina gave up the ball without hitting the 100 mark. Tech's Greg Wilson was fouled by Shaffer on a fast break with seven seconds left.

Wilson missed the free throw, Carolina moved the ball up court quickly, Shaffer passed to Exum with three seconds left and Exum hit from the left side at the buzzer to send the team and the fans into a frenzy worthy of the celebration after an ACC tourney win.

"I asked them why they did it," Tech coach Dwane Morrison said of the freeze his club put on the ball. "They didn't give me an answer. I assume it was so they wouldn't get 100 points."

"North Carolina was just awesome," Morrison said. "I'd say that when the season began Virginia was the best team in the ACC, but now I have my doubts. Right now I think Carolina has more talent."

The Tar Heels moved to 14-4 overall and 5-1 in the conference to remain one game behind Virginia. Tech dropped to 4-13 and stayed in the cellar of the ACC with a 0-7 record.

"Most games in the ACC will be close," Wood said. "So I don't think the game helped us that much, but it did give us a break."

"This was just the kind of game you have to forget about," Worthy said.

Ex-hostages return home to families

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP)—The 52 hostages came home Sunday to a sun-splashed welcome and a nation's love.

A presidential military jet called "Freedom One" carried the former prisoners of Iran to a hillside airport and the private embrace of their families.

Then—together at last—the hostages and their relatives rode at dusk through cheering, waving crowds lining Hudson Valley roads to a wild hello at the gates of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, where they have been promised two days of privacy.

President Reagan stayed at the White House to give the hostages and their families what they most wanted: the chance to talk to each other, alone.

Reagan met with the families Sunday morning in the State Dining Room at the White House to send them off to the reunion.

It was an emotional moment; he choked up.

Tears in his eyes, the new president said, "Since we all didn't get to church this morning because of this ceremony, can we just say, Dear God, thank you. Thank you for what you've done. And God give you the understanding and the patience that you'll need now with regard to this homecoming and get-together. Amen."

A great national welcoming, led by Reagan, is scheduled for Washington on Tuesday—a week after the hostages' release after 14½ months in captivity.

This was the most dramatic homecoming the nation has seen since prisoners of war flew home from North Vietnam in 1973. For the hostages, the trip started early Sunday at the Rhein-Main Air Base in West Germany.

But there was a somber moment when the motorcade carrying the hostages and their families twisted through the hills to West Point. It passed eight flagpoles flying American flags at half staff, in memory of eight servicemen killed in a failed rescue attempt last April.

As the hostages passed through the village of Highland Falls, a church bell pealed 444 times, once for each day in captivity. Finally the hostages' long trip was over and they poured into the Hotel Thayer where the assistant manager, Lee Curtis, offered them iced shrimp, chips, dips, hors d'oeuvres and drinks, and left them on their own.

When the plane landed at Stewart Airport at Newburgh, N.Y., the first hostage off, a Marine, kissed American ground.

Eight more Marines followed, and each saluted America as he stood in the plane doorway.

Then came the diplomats who had been caught in the U.S. Embassy when it was seized by Iranian militants on Nov. 4, 1979. A few of them had to be helped down the stairs of the ramp.

The hostages' families flooded the tarmac.

"Thank God!" they cried. "God bless America!"

Children grabbed onto their fathers' legs. The fathers lifted them into the air and cried. Kinfolk fell onto each other, hugging, crying, kissing and laughing.

Yellow ribbons were tied and pinned to everything and everyone.

The first reunion, which lasted a half hour, took place in an airport building decorated with two posters which said "Free at Last" and "Home of the Brave." Not even television cameras were allowed to intrude.

Airport manager Frank S. Tarbell could not tell reporters later the name of the first person off the plane. "It was a Marine, but I could not see the name tag for my tears," he said.

Gasoline market

Fuel costs force drivers to cut back

By KAREN HAYWOOD
Staff Writer

Gas prices have risen almost 7 cents per gallon, since The Daily Tar Heel's most recent survey of area gasoline stations was taken in December.

Station managers attributed the sudden increase to oil price hikes announced by several OPEC nations early this year.

As prices rise, more people pump their own gas, said Barry Cole of Eastgate Amoco. The survey showed the cost of gas at full-service pumps averaged 8 cents per gallon higher than at the self-service islands.

Pam Ragan of Ragan's Amoco on West Main Street in Carrboro said that station switched from full-service to self-service at Christmas time so that gas could be sold at lower prices.

Of the stations surveyed last week, The Pantry on Jones Ferry Road offered the lowest price on self-service with regular at $1.15. Walker's Gulf on East Franklin Street, which sells regular for $1.15.9 and unleaded for $1.20.9, was close behind. Unleaded gas at The Pantry is $1.23.

The higher prices are encouraging University students and employees to cut back on their driving to save money.

John DeKemper, a UNC sophomore from Charlotte, said his gas expenses took a big bite out of his spending money. DeKemper said he used to fill his Toyota Corolla for $7, but now it costs $15. "One day out of what I work goes for gas," he said.

Cabinet officials urge price decontrol

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two of President Reagan's Cabinet officers are urging him to take a step that could raise gasoline prices by 12 cents or more a gallon but at the same time add as much as $7 billion to the federal treasury.

The immediate decontrol of prices for crude oil and gasoline — which Reagan could accomplish by executive order — might by some estimates cost consumers $10 billion between now and when controls on these prices would expire anyway on Oct. 1.

This could happen because decontrol would allow the price of domestic oil to rise to world market levels. While there are various estimates of the price of oil, the Department of Energy's is that the price of domestic oil averaged $23 a barrel in December while that of imported oil averaged more than $35 a barrel.

Then-President Jimmy Carter, expressing concern about increasing U.S. reliance on expensive foreign oil, ordered a gradual lifting of price controls imposed by former President Richard M. Nixon in 1973 and left in place amid skyrocketing oil prices.

Carter and the Democratic-controlled Congress moved in the summer of 1979 to phase out these controls, and the first were removed Aug. 1, 1979. Congress also enacted a "wind-fall" tax, which will cost the oil industry an estimated $227.3 billion in the 1980s.

Under Carter's phased decontrol plan, the government lid on domestic price rises wouldn't be removed entirely until Oct. 1.

Bozyski announces for president

By WILLIAM PESCHEL
Staff Writer

Mark Bozyski, a junior zoology major from Chapel Hill, announced Friday he was a candidate for student body president.

"I feel I have a lot of contacts with a lot of people," he said. "I lived in three dorms and I made a lot of acquaintances with administrators, faculty and students. If I can get into office, I would have an unlimited source of information and help."

Bozyski said he wanted to promote recycling: "I'd get ECOS or someone to put out individual bins or unobtrusive drop boxes."

He also said he wanted to offer study trips abroad for a semester or a year.

He said he had not read the noise ordinance, but he could not see "how anybody could get arrested for just making noise."

"I'll be able to work well with Mayor Nassif, who is a friend of mine, and the townspeople."

The student body president should "be concerned for all aspects of the campus and the University community."

Mark Bozyski

he said. "I would not give preference over any other group."

"Student input is one of the major aspects of the job. They have the better ideas. It should work so that I would take the leadership position and get help from the students."

He said he would get students involved with government by "going out and talking with them. Whenever I meet students on campus I greet them. That is a start; people know you are receptive. I just hope that they would want to help. I want to get deeply involved and they should want to jump on that."

Bozyski is a member of Sigma Nu fraternity and treasurer of the Mediterranean Club.

Decision on tuition expected in summer

By KATHERINE LONG
Staff Writer

The 16-campus University of North Carolina system will not be told until the beginning of the summer whether a proposed $12 million tuition increase over two years will be put into effect, UNC officials said Sunday.

Gov. Jim Hunt and the Advisory Budget Commission have proposed that the university system generate $6.2 million in additional funds through tuition in fiscal year 1981-1982 and $6.3 million in fiscal 1982-1983. About $57 million of the system's $813 million operating budget comes from tuition.

The increase is part of an appropriations bill which will be voted on by the General Assembly before it recesses in the summer.

"It will be June at least before the appropriations bill will be passed," said Felix Joyner, UNC vice president in charge of finance.

"I would not be terribly optimistic about there not being a tuition increase," Joyner said. But he added, "It is not an unreasonable figure."

Joyner said the University had not recommended a tuition increase but had asked for larger appropriations from the General Assembly.

"Year upon year we have consistently opposed it (a tuition increase)," UNC President William Friday said. He said the University had tried to keep tuition at a level that would not be prohibitive. "We do not wish to see the ability of students to pay to be a controlling factor" in deciding whether or not to attend one of the 16 campuses, he said.

The last increase was made in 1977 and raised tuition by 10 percent for in-state students and enacted a flat increase for out-of-state students. Any increase in tuition would be higher for out-of-state students because they do not pay taxes to support the University system, officials said.

If a tuition increase were passed, the UNC Board of Governors would decide how to distribute the increase. The board has not yet begun discussion on how to carry out the increase.

University officials said they did not have an estimate of how much the proposed increase would raise tuition. But Friday said the increase would be distributed among the system's 16 campuses, which have a combined total enrollment of more than 100,000 students.
