

Revue cast lacks energy

Chez Condoret Cabaret fails to meet standards

By MARC ROUTH
Staff Writer

A successful musical revue requires well-trained voices, some inventive dialogue and a cohesive structure. But, "It Might as Well Be Spring" ... The Music of Richard Rodgers, the current offering of the Chez Condoret Cabaret, does not quite reach these standards in all three areas.

Compiled by Bob Arnel and Chris Klutz, the revue seems oddly constructed, relying on a mostly chronological presentation which doesn't highlight the music most familiar to the audience. And the dialogue is extremely sparse, adding little to the overall presentation. The opportunity to present some entertaining anecdotes or stories is ignored and some very uninteresting fillers take its place.

The cast seemed to be lacking in energy throughout the evening. However, Cabaret regulars Maggie Roberts and Stephen Barefoot stood out as performers more comfortable with the cabaret style, and they were also somewhat more energetic. Steve Watkins and Bevin Murphy didn't seem relaxed enough with their material to allow the audience to enjoy the humor of the lyrics and the melodies.

The opening few numbers are not particularly noteworthy. Maggie Roberts has a chance to show some of her comic abilities in this portion. But Steve Watkins misses the heavier, more robust sound necessary for "Blue Moon," though Bevin Murphy does capture some of the intended solemnity in "My Heart Stood Still."

Still it is not until Stephen Barefoot's "The Lady is a Tramp," that any real energy takes over the stage. Even though Barefoot does not do the piece justice vocally, his enthusiasm excuses him.

"Everything I've Got Belongs to You," a duet between Murphy and Watkins, is most successful in taking advantage of the cabaret style. The gentle opposition between the two provides both a humorous and an entertaining moment.

"Ten Cents a Dance" is an enjoyable moment as Roberts uses all her comic abilities to forge a polished rendition of the song. "My Funny Valentine" is performed with a warm, quiet, emotional quality by Barefoot that seems to mesh the lyrics and music in the way in which they were intended. "Poor Johnny One Note" was a zestful number, but unfortunately Murphy did not have the vocal power to ring out Johnny's one note loud and clear.

The Rodgers and Hammerstein set was among the most disappointing. The familiar songs seemed to be lost in an interesting but not particularly favorable arrangement. Some were introduced by the title of the musical, while others seemed to make their appearance unannounced.

For die-hard Richard Rodgers fans, the cabaret offers its audience the chance to hear over an hour of Rodgers' music. For those who are not that familiar with his music or are only familiar with his collaborations with Oscar Hammerstein, the evening may be a confusing one. The cabaret will be performed through April 11 with performances Wednesday through Saturday at 9 p.m. and special late shows on Friday and Saturday at 11 p.m. Reservations are required and can be made by calling 942-8714.

MARCIE! WHAT HAPPENED? WHERE AM I?
YOU'RE HOME, SIR... YOU GOT HIT ON THE HEAD BY A BASEBALL... IT WAS A WILD PITCH...
CHUCK THREW A WILD PITCH? BUT WE WON, DIDN'T WE? WE WERE AHEAD FIFTY TO NOTHING...
WE LOST, SIR... FIFTY-ONE TO FIFTY!
RICK, I DON'T REALLY UNDERSTAND THIS IS SO COMPLETELY OUT OF THE BLUE.
I KNOW IT SEEMS THAT WAY, BUT I'VE HEARD IT'S NOT THAT UNCOMMON. MANY PEOPLE JUST HAVE A KIND OF TRIP MICHIGAN.
YOU'RE GOING ALONG FINE AND Dandy, PERFECTLY HAPPY TO BE A SINGLE PERSON, HAPPY, BAM! YOU CLUCK IN TO A DIFFERENT MODE! SUDDENLY YOU WANT TO BE A MARRIED PERSON!
HOW ROMANTIC. I FEEL LIKE AN ANCIENT BRICKER.
