

New officers selected for Alumni Association

By DALE JENKINS
Staff Writer

The General Alumni Association at UNC has selected the new executive committee and board of directors for 1981-1982 and will officially install them on May 16 during Commencement weekend at a scheduled luncheon.

Ray S. Farris, Jr., a Charlotte attorney who served as president-elect this past year, will take over as president, succeeding John T. Church of Henderson. Edward L. Rankin, a 1940 graduate from Concord will take over as the new president-elect.

The first vice president for the new term will be Gwendolyn H. Waddell of Chapel Hill and the second vice president will be Robert V. Cox, a resident of Manhasset, N.Y. George Coxhead was re-elected as treasurer of the Association. In addition, Clarence E. Whitefield, director of Alumni Affairs, will continue to serve as the organization's secretary.

The Alumni Association works to bind the ties between the members of the Association and the University, Whitefield said.

"Primarily, we're engaged in activities for the alumni, such as a series of seminars, a series of class reunions, and also we sponsor homecoming next fall," Whitefield said. "We try to make the relationship between our alumni and the University more meaningful for both. That's our mission."

A new 50-member Board of Directors was also chosen, including four UNC students. They are student body president Scott Norberg; Daily Tar Heel Editor Jim Hummel; senior class president John Goodwin and president of the Order of the Bell Tower, the student alumni association, Harriet Morrison.

Mail ballots were sent out to all 26,000 dues-paying members to decide upon the new executive committee and board of directors, Whitefield said.

The board of directors will meet quarterly and any decisions needing to be made before the board meets again will be handled by the executive committee, Whitefield said.

The newly elected officers will meet June 26-27 for their initial board meeting.

fragmented Chapel Hill media market, she acknowledged there is always someone else looking for merchants' money.

The Advocate provides merchants with a strong print medium and a large circulation, Loudon said. An independent auditing company has estimated its circulation at 30,000.

Problems do arise for campus publications, however. The Daily Tar Heel loses a lot of classified ads to The Village Advocate, DTH Editor Jim Hummel said.

Citing general inflation as the major problem of the paper, Hummel outlined the problem of increasing production costs. "When I was a freshman we used to break even with a $800 four-page paper," Hummel said. "Now a four-page paper is $1,100." While The Tar Heel is actually selling the same amount of advertising, it is impossible to break even.

"Of the $350,000 budgeted for the DTH next year, $71,000 comes from student fees, Hummel said. But student fees have not increased in five years. "There's no money for campus organizations. We don't even keep up with inflation."

Other campus publications are also having financial problems. "The competition for the advertising dollar in this area is unbelievable," said George Shadrout, an editor of The Phoenix.

Because The Phoenix is a new publication, merchants are reluctant to advertise with the paper. "They say, 'Keep bringing us a paper. We'll hold off until we've seen five or six issues,'" said Tom Jessiman a Phoenix editor. But advertising has picked up now that merchants can see the product, Jessiman said.

The Phoenix' selling points to advertisers focus on the fact that it is a weekly and a tabloid. Some merchants prefer a weekly because people tend to hold on to it longer. Shadrout said while a daily paper is something people throw away one day before picking up another the next day.

Another selling point for The Phoenix is its low advertising rate, Jessiman said. The Phoenix charges $2.50 per column inch, while The Daily Tar Heel charges $4.25 per column inch.

Although some other Chapel Hill media do not rely on advertising, they are similarly plagued with financial problems. President Reagan's budget cuts will have a serious impact on public broadcasting, said Jake Dunlop, Director of the University of North Carolina Center for Public Television.

The budget cuts could mean as much as $150,000 to $200,000 would be cut from the UNC-TV budget, Dunlop said. The Center will also feel the peripheral effects of cuts to other agencies that produce shows for public television.

News In Brief

U.S. okays Saudi plane deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration formally announced it had decided to sell five sophisticated surveillance aircraft to Saudi Arabia, but that the key question of when to submit the proposal to Congress was still undecided.

The proposed arms package also includes sidewinder missiles and long-range fuel tanks for 62 F-15 jetfighters, which the Saudis already have on order, and tankers to give Saudi aircraft aerial refueling capability.

Congress can veto the controversial transaction, which Saudi Arabia clearly has made a test of its relationship with the United States, and the question of when the arms package will be submitted to Congress has not yet been decided.

State Department spokesman Dean Fischer said the five Airborne Warning and Control system (AWACS) planes probably would be delivered to the Saudis in 1985.

Atlanta toll reaches 25 dead

ATLANTA (AP) — A 23-year-old black man whose disappearance was never reported became the 25th victim Tuesday on the list of young blacks whose slayings are under investigation by a special police task force.

The death of Michael Cameron McIntosh was turned over to the task force within hours of an autopsy which revealed that McIntosh, like 13 earlier victims, died of asphyxiation.

His body was found in a river Monday afternoon, a short distance from where the bodies of two earlier victims were found three weeks ago.

Officials cleared in Carter case

WASHINGTON (AP) — An internal Justice Department investigation of Billy Carter's relationship with Libya reported Tuesday that no government officials engaged in illegal conduct.

Closing a nine-month investigation after more than 50 interviews, the department's internal watchdog, Michael E. Shaheen, specifically rejected any allegations of misconduct by then-President Jimmy Carter and members of his administration, including Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti, National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, or any State Department or Justice Department officials.

Shaheen repeated his conclusions, contained in an interim report released by the Senate just before last fall's presidential election, that Billy Carter lied to government agents who were investigating his ties to the Libyan government.

"No national gun law is going to make guns unavailable to those with criminal intent," Adkins said. "The only thing gun laws can do is restrict law-abiding citizens."

Adkins said police powers were correctly held on a statewide basis, rather than administered by the federal government. "Even so, state laws have failed to reduce crime, and putting handgun control on a federal level will only compound the problems of gun owners," he said.

Adkins also disagreed with the concept of registering gun owners or investigating people who requested gun permits. "Why not investigate all citizens and require them all to carry government identification saying what good citizens they are?" he asked.

Most people own handguns for self-defense, Adkins said. "Of the 60 million handguns in current private ownership, less than one-half of 1 percent are used in crime," he said.

A person said the idea of having a handgun for self-defense was misleading. "Chances for injury are 6 times greater for citizens who own handguns and try to protect themselves in an attack at home or on the street," she said.
