

Norberg letter questions drinking citations

By JOHN CONWAY
DTH Staff Writer

UNC Student Body President Scott Norberg has sent a letter to Chapel Hill Mayor Joe Nassif, voicing his concern over the recent rash of citations for public consumption of alcohol issued by the Chapel Hill Police Department.

"I seriously question... your approach to the enforcement of this law at this time," Norberg said in the letter delivered Friday. "For many years the town government has not taken the current hard-line stance on the enforcement of the public consumption of alcohol statutes. "Just last spring at the Franklin Street celebrations of the NCAA finals, for example, many people may have come away with the impression that public consumption of alcohol is all right."

Norberg said that he accepted that the law should be enforced. "If it's the law, people shouldn't be drinking in public." But, Norberg said, it was the manner in which the law was being enforced that concerns him.

"There are a lot better ways of getting people to stop drinking," Norberg said including employment of offenders in community service programs, rather than charging them with a criminal offense.

Nassif, who received the letter Monday, said that the arrests were not unfair or hypocritical. Students were forewarned of the ordinance in a press conference with the local media earlier in the school year.

It is the students' responsibility to educate and inform themselves on public laws, he said.

At least 114 students have been issued citations for violation of the public consumption law this fall. Many have sought help from Student Legal Services and have found that they have little choice but to pay the fine.

Norberg said he feared that concentration on enforcement of the drinking ordinance would divert police attention from enforcement of other laws. But he said that he hoped the town and Student Government can work together in an effective program to inform students about the law.

Nassif said there may be a press conference on the issue later this week.

Balloting debated

CGC requires report

After more than an hour of discussion, the Campus Governing Council passed a resolution Monday requiring the Elections Board to present a written project report on a new automated balloting system for the February election.

"I feel the Council strongly believes in a computer balloting system," said finance chairperson Mike Vandenberg after introducing the bill.

"I don't think (Elections Board Chairperson) Mark Jacobson understands the degree to which the Council supports the balloting system," Vandenberg said.

He said the report would help the CGC to determine whether to finance the system developed last year, implement a new system or scrap the whole idea.

The discussion started after a number of council members received conflicting reports as to what could be done to get a system into use.

The CGC had funded the purchase of software for an automated system last spring, but did not allocate the money needed to do the initial research because the testing did not fall under the category of a capital expense.

"It is going to be very difficult to do with an election on Oct. 6 and a possible run-off Oct. 13," said Jacobson.

The report is to be delivered to the Council at its Oct. 12 meeting.

A total of 18 of the 22 CGC members attended Monday's meeting. Although Student Body President Scott Norberg did not attend because of illness, no executive branch representatives attended.

Funds appropriated for chemistry building

Funds for the planning and construction of a new chemistry laboratory teaching facility have been appropriated through the State legislature.

"The undergraduate teaching laboratories in Venable Hall will be replaced with a new building," said Planning Officer Director Gordon Rutherford last week. The cost of the project will be $7.7 million. Funds to complete the planning of the building will be acquired this year, with funds for construction coming next year.

Construction should begin next fall and will take about two and a half years to complete.

New labs are needed to replace the ones in Venable because of the building's age. "The labs in Venable are pretty," said chemistry professor

James L. Coke Monday. "A cost analysis was done two years ago and it was determined that renovation of Venable would cost more than a new building would. Nothing really works well in the old labs."

The new facility will be about 60,000 square feet in size, located in the area between Venable Hall, Kenan Labs and Raleigh Road.

"Only in instructional labs in Venable will be vacated," said Coke. "The move involves about 30 percent of the building."

Venable currently houses lecture halls and office space in addition to the undergraduate instructional labs. The lecture halls and offices will remain in Venable.

News in Brief

Reagan condemns foreign aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ronald Reagan told officials of 141 nations Tuesday that global economic problems can be resolved only through fiscal austerity combined with reliance on "the magic of the marketplace."

His speech, opening the annual meeting of the World Bank and International Monetary Fund, amounted to an appeal to other nations to embrace his own prescription for economic recovery.

Some 2,000 delegates — many representing avowedly socialist countries — heard Reagan say that foreign aid cannot be the primary element of the development strategies of poorer countries.

Reagan said, "unless a nation puts its own financial and economic house in order, no amount of aid will produce progress."

Preyer announces he won't run

L. Richardson Preyer squelched rumors that he would run for the 6th Congressional district seat at a press conference Tuesday in Greensboro.

Preyer, who teaches a class on Congress in the UNC political science department and has an appointment in Social and Administrative Medicine at UNC, lost a reelection bid this past November to Republican Gene Johnston.

Preyer said he had a full-time commitment to UNC until next March. "I would not be able to give a campaign the kind of effort and time it deserves," Preyer said in a prepared statement.

Preyer's appointment to the faculty runs until March of next year. He said he had no plans after that date, but said he would consider reappointment to the faculty if it were offered.
