

Death of Sadat puts AWACS sale in limbo

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The assassination of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat prompted congressional leaders Tuesday to urge postponement of consideration of President Ronald Reagan's arms sale to Saudi Arabia.

Senate Republican leader Howard H. Baker, who supports the sale, said Congress should place a moratorium on worrying about the $8.5 billion arms package.

Meanwhile, at Reagan's request, the House Foreign Affairs Committee postponed for a day its vote on a resolution to veto the sale. Two-thirds of the panel are on record for halting delivery of the weapons. The vote was rescheduled for Wednesday.

Baker's comments seemed to reflect a widespread sentiment that both sides would be well-served by delaying a decision long enough to assess the effect of Sadat's death on the region.

"A delay would be very popular on the Hill," said a senior congressional aide who has been closely involved in efforts to revise terms for the sale.

Debate on the arms package focused on whether it is essential to help the Saudis or if the slaying was further evidence of instability and a reason to block new weapons deliveries to the region.

Baker, who has been directing the effort to rescue the package in the Senate, said he now is fearful about the prospects for peace in the Middle East. "I'm very concerned about the destabilizing effect," he told reporters at the Capitol.

In the Senate, where the $8.5 billion package faced a formidable front of critics, some Democrats and Republicans suggested the president may now be able to argue more persuasively that it is essential to bolster moderate regimes in the Middle East.

One of 19 Republican opponents immediately switched in favor of the sale of AWACS radar planes and jet-fighter equipment.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said, "I'm going to reverse my vote on AWACS and support the president. We have to have the safeguards this deployment makes."

Hatch was one of a dozen Republicans targeted by Reagan and his strategists for a heavy dose of presidential lobbying. The Senate GOP leadership estimated it would take that many switches from the ranks of the opposition and the uncommitted to forestall a veto.

Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd urged the Senate to "take a step back ... until we see how things fall into place."

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., assistant minority leader and a leading opponent of the sale, predicted there would be a delay in floor consideration.

Government debates aimed at state-owned car use

By ALAN CHAPPLÉ
DTH Staff Writer

The use of North Carolina state-owned cars sparked two separate but heated debates within state government recently, involving alleged misuses of state vehicles.

The first dispute erupted last month when the Department of Administration charged that the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill was operating as many as 600 state-owned vehicles. John Temple, vice-chancellor for business and finance, argued that the University only used 458 vehicles — 188 cars and 270 trucks.

The original estimate was made by administration secretary Jane Patterson while commenting to a legislative committee following up on the General Assembly's crackdown on abuses in the use of state-owned vehicles.

Patterson, whose department will take over management of all state-owned vehicles next year, said her department had confirmed that 4,815 vehicles were assigned to state employees, with 600 assigned to the University.

Temple, however, strongly disagreed with Patterson's figures, saying, "The figures just don't compare."

After a formal count of University vehicles in use, Temple reported only 458 were in use at the school. "Even if you counted all of the maintenance tractors and trailers we have, it still wouldn't add up," he said, pointing out the more than fifty other non-transportation vehicles used.

All the vehicles used at the University are for official school use according to Temple. The only person assigned a state car full-time is Chancellor Christopher Fordham.

Some employees are permitted to take cars home, but they are usually employees who are on 24-hour call.

Another dispute involved a suggestion by State Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, that North Carolina's elected Council of State members should be treated the same as other state workers who use state-owned cars.

Royall, chairman of both the Advisory Budget Commission and Senate Ways and Means Committee, said council members should be required to reimburse the state for personal use of their state cars, including mileage traveled to and from work.

Currently all nine members of the council, except Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, have permanently assigned state cars. Green has use of a State Bureau of Investigation car with an agent assigned as bodyguard and driver.

Patterson, who must make the decision, asked the budget commission and the Legislature's Governmental Operations Commission for guidance.

Royall, who is on both panels, said he and other legislators favored requiring the council members to pay. "If you're going to treat everybody fairly, the feeling ... was they ought to be treated like anyone else," Royall told Patterson.

Patterson said no decision would be made on the council until January. The department's car regulations still are subject to a public hearing and the approval of the governor.

Advisers move

After today, the student advisory section of the College of Arts and Sciences will be located on the third floor of Steele Building.

No appointments with advisers will be scheduled today or Thursday, but they will resume Monday.

A dean will be available in the new office Thursday morning for students with emergency situations.

The move was planned more than seven years ago, Donald Boulton, vice chancellor for student affairs, said. It has been delayed for planning reasons.

"It's a great case of dominoes," Boulton said. Several organizations such as the graduate school, the Development Office and the North Carolina Press had to be relocated to their respective offices before the College of Arts and Sciences could move.

The Arts and Sciences advisers join General College advisers, who moved to the first and second floor of Steele Building before the fall semester began.

Because of the move, seniors in the College of Arts and Sciences who will graduate in December will be allowed to apply for their degrees through Oct. 14.

condition with lung and shoulder wounds. Tully was reported to have suffered a slight facial injury.

Defense Minister Abdel Halim Abu Ghazala and Mubarak, who was on the other side of Sadat in the reviewing stand, were unharmed, Egyptian officials said. First reports said the defense minister was wounded during the shooting.

Fawzi Abdel-Hafez, Sadat's personal secretary, and Mohammed Rashwan, his personal photographer, were killed, reporters said. The names of the other dead were not immediately known.

Elements of the U.S. Rapid Deployment Force and U.S. warships in the Mediterranean and Middle East "have been placed on increased readiness" in the wake of Sadat's assassination, the Reagan administration announced.

The statement was released by the Pentagon and officials who indicated that the actions were intended as a warning to Libyan leader Moammar Khadafi or anybody else who might be tempted to move against Egypt and take advantage of any instability there.

On Capitol Hill, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. was quoted as saying Libya may have known in advance of the assassination.

"We have full confidence in the Egyptian transition process," a statement said.

One Pentagon official, elaborating on the brief statement, said some elements of the Rapid Deployment Force "have been contacted and requested to take the necessary actions to hasten their ability to move, if directed to do so."

In Washington, President Ronald Reagan said with the death of Sadat, "America has lost a close friend, the world has lost a great statesman and mankind has lost a champion of peace ... In a world filled with hatred, he was a man of hope."

Reagan said the assassination was an act of "cowardly infamy ... Today, the people of the United States join with the people of Egypt and all those who long for a better world in mourning the death of Anwar Sadat."

In Jerusalem, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said he hoped the U.S.-sponsored peace process with Egypt would continue "as President Sadat would have wanted with all his heart. I have lost not only a partner in the peace process but also a friend."

Former President Jimmy Carter sadly saluted Sadat Tuesday as a courageous leader and the most influential peacemaker of the 20th century, adding softly, "I never had a more personal and closer friend."

His voice heavy with emotion, Carter invoked Sadat's name in exhorting Egypt to maintain the fragile peace the former U.S. president helped the country forge with Israel.

Carter said, "Sadat was always a man of courage. He never feared for his own life if it meant the advancement of the well-being of his own people in Egypt, or peace in his region and throughout the world."

"I don't know of any one who has contributed more toward peace on Earth in my lifetime, and perhaps this century, than has Anwar Sadat," Carter told about 60 tourists and reporters in Plains, Ga.

But hard-line Arabs reacted with joy, firing rifles in the air in Lebanon to celebrate the death of the man who signed the peace treaty with Israel. The Palestine Liberation Organization's security chief, Abu Iyad, said he would "shake the hand of the man who pulled the trigger."

News in Brief

Budget faces test from Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional support for President Ronald Reagan's new round of spending cuts faced its first test Tuesday as the House considered an $87.3 billion appropriations bill which the administration decided was hundreds of millions over budget.

The House voted 383-30 to cut $74 million from the measure, but the decisive vote was expected later on a Republican move to send it back to a committee drawing board in light of a potential presidential veto.

Reagan's House allies argued that the appropriations bill for the departments of Labor, Education and Health and Human Services must be trimmed.

"This is the best of bills and the worst of bills," said Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois. On another day and another time it would have received nearly unanimous support, he said.

But the bill "is excessive and the president surely will veto it," Michel said in a speech on the House floor.

Reagan vowed last week to veto any budget-busting bills Congress sends him.

Richardson receives sentence

DURHAM (AP) — Chris Lee Richardson was sentenced to 25 years to life in prison Tuesday for his conviction on charges of murder in the April beating death of a sunbather.

A co-defendant, Guy Charles Osbahr, received a seven to 10-year sentence for his plea of involuntary manslaughter in the death.

Richardson, 20, also received a maximum of seven years in prison for armed robbery and five to seven years for assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury in the death of Ronald Antonevitch, 46, of Mebane.

During Tuesday's hearing, Richardson said he was sorry for what happened down at the river, but argued that court accounts differed from what actually happened.

CIA restrictions to be loosened

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pending presidential order would place fewer restrictions on CIA infiltration of domestic groups than that of an earlier draft shelved last March after a storm of protest, government sources said Tuesday.

The latest plan, if signed by President Reagan, would replace restrictions imposed on U.S. intelligence agencies by President Carter in 1978. It would permit the CIA to infiltrate and with the attorney general's approval, influence domestic groups, sources said.

The CIA is barred from such activities under the Carter order. The March draft would have permitted the CIA to infiltrate a domestic organization only if that action "is strictly limited in its nature, scope and duration to a lawful purpose related to foreign intelligence."

Power lines may decorate dune

RALEIGH (AP) — Jockey's Ridge State Park, where the tallest sand dune on the East Coast rises high on the narrow Outer Banks, may have a new high-voltage power line stretched across part of it, if the General Assembly passes a bill before the state House.

Sponsored by Rep. Charles Evans, D-Dare, the bill would allow the state to grant an easement 1,700 feet long and 60 feet wide through the northwestern corner of the park for a Virginia Electric and Power Co. transmission line.

Officials of the state parks and recreation division said they opposed the move and feared it would set a precedent for giving up lands protected by the state Nature and Historic Preserve Act.
